SUMMARY: Amends Section 505.1 of the Landlord and Tenant Act to address the disposition of abandoned personal property. This legislation would take effect in 60 days.

ANALYSIS: Amends the Landlord and Tenant Act of 1951 to give landlords the authority to solely determine when tenants have relinquished their property, without judicial determination as presently required under current law.

A landlord can deem property abandoned if any of the following apply:

- The tenant has vacated the unit following the termination of a written lease.
- An eviction order or order for possession in favor of the landlord has been entered and the tenant has vacated the unit and removed substantially all personal property.
- An eviction order or order for possession in favor of the landlord has been executed.
- The tenant has provided the landlord with written notice of a forwarding address and has vacated the unit and removed substantially all personal property.
- The tenant has vacated the unit without communicating intent to return, the rent is more than 15 days past due, and subsequent to those events, and the landlord has posted notice of the tenant's rights regarding the property.

Prior to removing or disposing abandoned property, the landlord must provide the tenant a written notice of their rights. The tenant will then have ten days from the postmark date of the notice to retrieve the property or to request that the property be stored for an additional period not exceeding thirty days from the date of the notice. Storage will be provided at a place of the landlord's choosing and the tenant will be responsible for all storage costs.

If a landlord has knowledge or is notified of a protection from abuse order for the protection of the tenant or a member of the tenant's immediate family, the landlord shall refrain from disposing of any personal property of the tenant for thirty days from the date of notice. If requested by the tenant, the landlord will store personal items for up to thirty days from the date of request.

In cases of a deceased tenant, the personal representative of the estate would succeed to the rights and obligations of the tenant and the landlord may advise him of the provisions of subsections (d) and (e) if the landlord has not been contacted by the personal representative after fourteen days since the issuance of a death certificate and the rent is at least fifteen days late. If the landlord has not been contacted by a personal representative (and has no reason to know who the individual is), the landlord shall make reasonable attempts to find and notify a personal representative, and shall mail a notice to the address of the leased premises and to any emergency contact or other person known to the landlord.

FISCAL IMPACT: This legislation would have no adverse fiscal impact on Commonwealth or municipal funds.
