SESSION OF 1981

165TH OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

No. 62

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The House convened at 1 p.m., e.d.t.

THE SPEAKER (MATTHEW J. RYAN) IN THE CHAIR PRAYER

REV. HENRI A. EBERLY, chaplain of the House of Representatives and associate pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

God of our Fathers, God of our Nation, we come into Your presence this day to thank You for this great State, this "Cradle of Liberty" that we have been privileged to call our home. For the citizens of this Commonwealth - the young and old, the rich and poor, the laborers, the managers of industry, the farmers who work the soil, factory workers, the professionally skilled - for all those who have contributed to our State's greatness, we offer to You our praise and our gratitude.

On an occasion like this when we are privileged to celebrate 300 years of history, we rejoice in the gift of memory whereby we are able to keep alive those persons who have brought us to this time and this place. We remember especially on this day one William Penn, who sought to make this colony a refuge from religious intolerance and promised to do whatever sober and free men could reasonably desire for the security and improvement of their happiness.

Finally, O Lord, as we gather in this hallowed building whose very walls cry out with so many important events in our State's history, we seek Your guidance for those who are in positions of authority, those who lead us in our government. Endow our State Representatives with unswerving dedication to uphold justice and to maintain freedom. We offer our prayers of thanksgiving, we offer our petitions for Your guidance in the name of Him who came among us not to be served but to serve, even Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

(The Pledge of Allegiance was enunciated by members.)

WELCOMES

The SPEAKER. The Chair is pleased to welcome to the hall of the House today as the guests of Representative Letterman, Mrs. Phyllis Hanobic, Mr. Frank Hanobic, Miss Christina Richardson, Mr. Robert Klewans, Jr., and Mr. William Boulter.

The Chair is pleased to welcome to the hall of the House today as the guest of Representative George Pott of Allegheny County, Molly and Gwen McIntyre from Bradfordwoods, Pennsylvania.

We are very pleased to have as a guest of the House today an exchange student from Torená, Mexico, Miss Celina Casas, who is an exchange student at the Coatesville Area High School. She is sponsored by the Coatesville Rotary Club in Pennsylvania and is the guest of Representative Earl Smith of Chester County.

GUESTS PRESENTED

The SPEAKER. We have two special guests here today, guests of Representative Ruth Harper of Philadelphia, Miss Janine Gardner, who was selected as Miss Ebony Pennsylvania, and Miss Emily Gonzalez, selected as Little Miss Ebony Pennsylvania, here today with their parents as the guests of Representative Harper, seated to the left of the rostrum.

The Chair recognizes the lady from Philadelphia, Mrs. Harper, for the purpose of making a presentation.

Mrs. HARPER. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I am pleased to have as my guests this afternoon Miss Janine Gardner, Miss Ebony Pennsylvania, and we decided to do something different this year. We have a Little Miss Ebony Pennsylvania, Emily Gonzalez, and I am only going to read one of the citations.

CITATION BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WHEREAS, The selection of Janine Gardner of Philadelphia, as Miss Ebony for Pennsylvania attests to her superior achievement, warmth, sensitivity, outstanding leadership and beauty.

Now therefore, the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, extends congratulations to Miss Janine Gardner on being selected Miss Ebony for Pennsylvania; extends best wishes for continued success in her future endeavors; and further directs that a copy of this citation be delivered to Miss Janine Gardner, 511 Tilghman Street, Chester, Pennsylvania.

Janine is from Chester, Pennsylvania, and she comes from the district of Representative Robert Wright.

I shall present these citations to the very talented young women. Janine played the organ for her talent, and Emily Gonzalez played the piano for her talent.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Deal.

Mr. DEAL. Mr. Speaker, may I make a short comment about Representative Harper and this particular project?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is in order and may proceed.

Mr. DEAL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to comment about the action of Representative Harper. I would want Representative Harper to know that I am personally honored to be a part of this legislative body that would have a person like her who would be so concerned about young people that she would put together a pageant and would work at it for over 9 years and have been fortunate enough to send approximately six of those young people even out of the country. I am happy that she had the good sense to invite those young people here in the House of the Pennsylvania congress. I am sure that this is a historical event for them and will forever remain in their lives that they had this great opportunity to appear before this august body.

I would also feel that we are blessed and enriched here in the legislative body, because so often we read so much negativity about our young people, but then when we have presented to us as was presented today, it is so refreshing to see that our young people are really trying to make it and move forward. We can feel sure, with this kind of example, that America will be in better hands in years to come.

I would like to say thank you, Mr. Speaker, for having allowed me this opportunity, and thank you, Representative Harper, for allowing me to be a part of a body that you are with.

WELCOMES

The SPEAKER. The Chair is pleased to welcome to the hall of the House today as the guests of Representative Kenneth Brandt of Lancaster, his mother, Mrs. Brandt, and his aunts, Mrs. Emily Heisey, Mrs. Agnes Weaver, and Mrs. Ruth Ebersole.

The Chair is pleased to welcome to the hall of the House today a former member of this House, a former Speaker of this House, here today as the guest of the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Pievsky, the Honorable Herbert Fineman.

The Chair is pleased to welcome to the hall of the House today as the guests of the Delaware County delegation, Mr. Thomas Savage and family, from Glenolden, Pennsylvania, the district represented by Gerald Spitz of the Delaware County delegation.

The Chair is pleased to welcome to the hall of the House today Mrs. Gretchen Williams, Mrs. Mabel Stoner, Mrs. William Sherlock, and Susan Sherlock, here today as the guests of Mr. Hal Mowery of Cumberland County.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. As the members of the House have been advised, the rededication ceremony will take place in the rotunda beginning at approximately 1:30. Because of space considerations, there are no reserved seats for the members of the House, although we certainly hope that everyone will be present.

At this time, without objection, I am going to call the House in recess until 4 o'clock. There will be no further roll calls today. There will be reports of the Rules Committee and the acceptance of committee reports.

QUESTION OF INFORMATION

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Montgomery, Mr. Gladeck.

Mr. GLADECK. Mr. Speaker, is it the Chair's intention to take a master roll today?

COMMUNICATION

The White House
Washington

October 16, 1981

I am delighted to send my warmest greetings and best wishes to all those gathered for the rededication of the State Capitol of Pennsylvania.

When John Harris gave tracts of land to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in 1785, he helped to found the Capitol of a State that has been a microcosm of America ever since. Pennsylvania's past contains nearly every theme of America's historical development. From the struggle for Independence to the Civil War and to the present, this State has played a major role in our country's history.

Just as Teddy Roosevelt accepted a gold medal commemorating the original dedication in 1906, so I am proud to accept, for the American people, a gold medal commemorating this 75th anniversary and rededication of the Harrisburg Capitol. It is a privilege for our nation to receive this medal from a State that has meant so much to the rest of the country and to the world.

May the future of this Capitol be as bright and successful as it has been in the past.

Sincerely,
Ronald Reagan

PRELUDE

(The prelude was presented by the Pennsylvania State University Chamber Choir and Brass Quintet: "Fanfare: La Peri"; "Wondrous Love"; "O Vos Omnes"; "'Tis The Gift To Be Simple"; "Set Down, Servant"; "O Clap Your Hands"; and "America The Beautiful.")

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Ladies and gentlemen, the music today is provided by the Pennsylvania State University Chamber Choir and Brass Quintet.

Shall we show our appreciation.

INTRODUCTION

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Good afternoon. I am Representative Joseph Pitts of Chester County.

The House of Representatives has honored me with the chairmanship of the Special Tercentenary Committee created March 9, 1981, by HR 23 to appropriately celebrate the 300th birthday of the Commonwealth. Today we meet to rededicate this Capitol Building on its 75th birthday and to make a commitment to ensure that this Capitol is restored and preserved for all future generations of Pennsylvanians.

This Capitol's predecessor was destroyed by fire on February 2, 1897. During the time the present Capitol was under construction, the General Assembly met in session in the Grace United Methodist Church of Harrisburg. I present to you the Reverend Calvin H. Cole, Sr., today's minister of that church. Reverend Cole.

INVOCATION

REVEREND COLE. May we bow our heads in an attitude of prayer.

Eternal God, giver of life, eternal source of love which desires for life and persons the attributes of liberty and justice and the pursuit of happiness: We thank You that we can this day stand on a place made sacred through the heritage of William Penn's great experiment of liberty, a place made sacred as an expression of architectural genius among humankind, a place made sacred as the nerve center of representative government, a place made sacred as a place of and for the people.

As we thank You for this edifice for government for the last 75 years, lead us to a new commitment to the imperatives of history, the challenges of the future, and to a sensitivity to the people, that the few who gather here may continue as the servants of all in this decade and the decades to come. May truth, compassion, liberty, and justice prevail for the service of humankind and the glory of God. Amen.

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Reverend Cole.

PLEDGE TO THE FLAG AND REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Ladies and gentlemen, the House committee which I chair is bipartisan. It is my good fortune and that of the committee to have serving as vice chairman, the Honorable Kurt D. Zwinkl of Lehigh County. I present to you Representative Zwinkl.

REPRESENTATIVE ZWINKL. Thank you very much, Joe.

Those of you who are seated, I would ask you to please rise for the pledge to the flag.

(The Pledge of Allegiance was enunciated.)

REPRESENTATIVE ZWINKL. Thank you. You may be seated.

Today we are celebrating the first 75 years since our State Capitol Building was dedicated in 1906. Pennsylvania's many State capitols have been known to ramble around the State in search of a permanent home, and the decision to place it in Harrisburg took only a century and a half of debate. The very first seat of government was in New Castle, now the State of Delaware, when Pennsylvania was a proprietary colony. The first Assembly under William Penn met in Chester, Delaware County, and it only lasted 3 days. The secret to the short session was simple. Penn only allowed members to vote "yea" or "nay" on proposed legislation and no amendments were offered to proposed bills.

Starting in 1683, the legislature under Penn and later the British Crown met in numerous locations in Philadelphia, including private homes, until the first permanent site, the State House, was completed in 1735. That State House building became famous in its own right as Independence Hall and witnessed some of the most significant events in early American history, including the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the Articles of Confederation.

Philadelphia was a fine place for national events, but the westward march of population in the State after the Revolutionary War caused pressure to move the capitol. As early as 1784, John Harris, the founder of Harrisburg, made his offer of land to relocate the State capitol to the banks of the Susquehanna. John Harris had the foresight to realize that his town would make a perfect location for the capitol, and he actually made out a deed for the land. The original Harris Land Grant is on display here in the Capitol rotunda this afternoon. The grant is permanently displayed at the John Harris Mansion on Front Street.

During the next 35 years, the Pennsylvania legislature held periodic debates about where the capitol should be permanently located. Such towns as Reading, Carlisle, Lancaster, Sunbury, and, of course, Harrisburg all vied for the honor. Meanwhile, in 1799 the legislature moved the State capitol to Lancaster, where it stayed for 12 years. While in Lancaster, heated debate continued as to where the permanent capitol should be. Finally Harris' offer was accepted and plans were made to move the capitol to Harrisburg, largely because the Susquehanna River offered a major geographic divide. For 10 years the legislature met in the Dauphin County Courthouse until the first Capitol Building, designed by architect Stephen Hills, was completed in 1822, and then John Harris' dream had come true. However, that first Capitol Building was destroyed by fire in 1897. After this disaster the legislature met in the Grace Methodist Church on State Street, as you heard earlier, while the present Capitol was under construction.

The second Capitol, built by Isaac Cobbs, was enlarged by architect Joseph Huston and was also extensively remodeled. At a cost of $13 million, a stupendous sum in those days, Pennsylvania built the present State Capitol Building in the classic Renaissance style. By October 1906, the city of Harrisburg was ready to host the building's dedication with all possible ceremony.

For several days prior to President Theodore Roosevelt's arrival, the city prepared for the dedication through a general cleanup. The police were directed to arrest anyone using undignified novelties such as cowbells, tin horns, or confetti. The Capitol Park area was illuminated with electric lights, and giant searchlights cast their glow upon the Capitol dome. Observers said it was an incredibly beautiful sight. In the immediate vicinity of the Capitol Building, a total of 9 tons of patriotic bunting was used.

A light rain fell as an estimated crowd of 30,000 people awaited the President's train. As it crossed the Susquehanna, a 21-gun salute was fired and bands played as the Presidential train arrived. As President Roosevelt's party approached the Capitol Building shortly before noon, the crowd surged forward trying to grasp a glimpse of the President. People climbed into trees for a better look, and those in the rear shouted for the umbrellas to be put down in front of them. Finally President Roosevelt was introduced to the cheering crowd, and as he started to speak, the rain suddenly ceased.

The President commenced with a tribute to the State, and I quote:

It is a very real pleasure for me to attend these ceremonies at the capitol of your great State. In every great crisis of our government the attitude of Pennsylvania has been of crucial importance, as the affectionate nickname of "Keystone State" signifies. Pennsylvania has always looked warily before she leapt, and it was well that she should do so. But having finally made up her mind, in each great crisis of our national history, her weight has been cast unhesitatingly upon the right side, and has been found irresistible.

Thus, our State Capitol Building was dedicated 75 years ago, and the prophetic vision of John Harris was once again confirmed.

WELCOME

REPRESENTATIVE ZWIKL. It is my privilege at this time to present the next speaker, who has been a member of the House of Representatives since 1963. He resides in Media, Delaware County. He is the former majority leader of the House of Representatives and is currently serving as the Speaker of the House of Representatives. May I present to you the Honorable Matthew J. Ryan.

SPEAKER RYAN. Thank you, Kurt.

Off of my prepared remarks, this has been my favorite project for some 19 years that I have served in Harrisburg; that is, ensuring that this Capitol Building stay as it was designed and that in the future it remains that way.

This Capitol Building is a priceless treasure of the people of Pennsylvania. It is a symbol of our heritage. Its sculpture, its art, its design are unique; they can never be replaced. It is our duty and our opportunity to act now to ensure that this treasure of the people will stand in all her beauty and fullness for so long as Pennsylvania and the dream of William Penn endure. May Pennsylvania and that dream forever endure.

Encircling you high on the rotunda and beneath the Capitol dome are inscribed words of William Penn which reflected his dream for this land called Pennsylvania. It reads: "There may be room there for such a holy experiment. For the nations want a precedent. That an example may be set up to the nations. That we may do the right thing that is truly wise and just. And my God will make it the seed of a nation."

William Penn's dream and his prayers were answered in full measure. Generation after generation of Pennsylvanians have given in spirit, in love, and often in battle to keep intact, and to pass on, that dream. As we act today to rededicate this Capitol Building, let us each also resolve to rededicate ourselves to unselfishly serve, to "do the right thing that is truly wise and just." The Commonwealth's past, her present, and her future deserve no less.

I welcome you, and I thank you for sharing in this observance and rededication.

At this time I would like to introduce the President Pro Tempore of the Senate, the Honorable Henry G. Hager. Senator Hager.

PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE HAGER. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

A lesson of history is that the world does largely know and long remember great events. History also teaches us that some events participated in by some people of any time are recorded and referred to, if not generally remembered.

Many things have been done under the power of and in the name of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, some of them proudly remembered and some sooner forgotten.

May this celebration of our heritage serve also to remind us of the future, that we may so conduct ourselves and so direct our larger endeavors so that if at some future date some as yet unlettered historian shall seek our footsteps in the sands of time, he will find that our path was straight along the high ground and that we dared to break new territory in our search for peace, for human dignity, inspired governance, and enlightened stewardship of the whole earth.

By this commitment, this commemoration of a long-past time will provide strong purpose for all time. Thank you.

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Senator Hager and Speaker Ryan.

PRESENTATION OF TRICENTENARY MEDALS

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. The Commonwealth is the home of the world's largest private mint. It is the Franklin Mint of Franklin Center, Delaware County, Pennsylvania. To commemorate this occasion and the 300th anniversary of Pennsylvania's birth, they have most generously and enthusiastically made a lasting contribution.

It is my privilege to introduce to you the House majority leader, Representative Samuel Hayes of Blair County. He will present to you a representative of that firm.

REPRESENTATIVE HAYES. I am honored to be a participant in this commemoration of Pennsylvania's 300th year as a colony and commonwealth. It is my dream that she will continue to enjoy a limitless life and that she will always fulfill the highest ideals held for her by our founder, William Penn, and those words which we live by today - virtue, liberty, and independence.

Among Pennsylvania's proud citizens is the famous Franklin Mint. Earlier this session the House of Representatives and Senate of Pennsylvania by resolution commissioned the Franklin Mint to serve as the official minter of a Commonwealth medal, which is to commemorate the Commonwealth's 300th birthday and this Capitol rededication ceremony.

This historic medal is available in castings of silver and bronze. Title to the medal has been given by Franklin Mint to the Pennsylvania Historical Society. All proceeds received from the medals will be consigned to the Commonwealth to be held in trust and to be used solely for historical restoration here at our State Capitol.

Official presentation of medals will now be made by Franklin Mint as a symbol of their gift to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and her people.

I am pleased to present Mr. Frank Fitzpatrick, who serves as vice president of the Franklin Mint. Mr. Fitzpatrick.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We are pleased to be able to participate in some small way in this very, very outstanding occasion. The employees in the offices of the Franklin Mint Corporation are proud that we are in Pennsylvania and that we helped to contribute to make Pennsylvania the minting capital of the United States.

At this time I would like to present the gold medal to Mr. Kermit Roosevelt. This medal actually is being presented to the people of the United States through Mr. Kermit Roosevelt.

(Medal was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Governor Thornburgh, we have something unique and different for you. This is a gold-plated model of the sculptor's work that created the dies to produce this coin. On behalf of the employees and the officers of the Franklin Mint, we would like to present this to you, Governor, as our token of appreciation for the fine job you are doing. It is for the people of the Commonwealth, however, through you.

(Model was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Lieutenant Governor Scranton. I might add that Lieutenant Governor Scranton had the privilege of striking the gold medal that Mr. Kermit Roosevelt will present to the people of the United States.

(Medal was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Senator Robert Jubelirer.

(Medal was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Senator Edward P. Zemprelli.

(Medal was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Representative Samuel E. Hayes, Jr., on behalf of the House of Representatives.

(Medal was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. And Representative James J. Manderino on behalf of the House of Representatives.

(Medal was presented.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I want to thank you for the opportunity to be here, and I hope that we are still around for the next 100 years to strike the next medal. Thank you.

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Mr. Fitzpatrick, for your very generous and magnificent contribution to this commemorative occasion.

PRESENTATION OF ENGRAVING

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. At this point in the program I would like to mention that the Honorable K. Leroy Irvis, minority leader of the House of Representatives, is unable to be with us today. It is my pleasure, though, to present to you a distinguished leader of the State House who enthusiastically provides leadership to the cause of preserving the Commonwealth's heritage. He is the Democratic whip, the Honorable James J. Manderino of Westmoreland County.

REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO. Thank you, Representative Pitts.

Today is a day of celebration. It is a day of rededication. We dedicate ourselves to the preservation of our beautiful Capitol Building. We accept the duty to preserve and pass to succeeding generations the artistic forms of our inheritance, but we must acknowledge that our inheritance is not only material; it is also spiritual. The grandeur and beauty around us have their deepest meanings because they strive to tell us of our spiritual heritage.

Today in this great rotunda we hear echoes of voices from the past. We hear the words of those who came before us, plainspoken words, high-minded words, the words of dream seekers and freedom lovers, words that come to us now in a crescendo of voices, words spoken in nearly all the tongues of the world, the voices of a trickle of immigrants that over the centuries turned into a mighty nation. William Penn's great experiment has succeeded. He did plant the seed of a nation. The Quaker tradition of tolerance attracted thousands and then millions of immigrants: tolerance, the soil wherein the tree of justice is rooted; tolerance, whose governmental expression is a system of guaranteed civil rights, rights inherent, rights inalienable, and rights due to all of humankind.

Today let us rededicate ourselves to the most generous and noble aspect of our spiritual inheritance, to our system of justice. Our system of justice is founded on an idea that has revolutionized the world, and that idea simply stated is that we do not have to agree with people to defend them from injustice.

Above us in the southwest corner of this great rotunda is the figure of blindfolded justice, and inscribed there are these words: "Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been and ever will be pursued until it be obtained, or until liberty be lost in the pursuit."

And now, continuing with our celebration, it is my pleasure to introduce Mr. James Mooney. Mr. Mooney is the director of the Pennsylvania Historical Society and has come to give a gift today to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Mr. Mooney.

Mr. MOONEY. Thank you very much, sir.

It is for me a great honor to be here this afternoon on this most happy occasion, and it is on behalf of the president and the officers and members of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania that I bring greetings from that august private organization.

It was within the walls of our building at 1300 Locust Street in Philadelphia that, as good fortune would have it, we came across a marvelous cache of—one could call them duplicates, or just the luck of the gods—but we did find a large number of engravings of the State Capitol done something over 75 years ago, and signed on the sheet by the engraver gave them an added value to us who found them and I hope will give an added value to those who receive them.

The Historical Society is happy to participate in this rededication of this handsome building by donating a number of these engravings to the cause of the preservation of this glorious structure. A very small number of these originals will be for sale in that cause later on. In the meantime, we will have the honor of seeing our gift to the Commonwealth presented to some of the leadership of both Houses, and also, I am happy to say that it is for me a great honor to present one to the Governor of the Commonwealth. Thank you very much.

(Engraving was presented.)

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Mr. Mooney, for sharing with us this beautiful and historic photoengraving. I understand they found these in the attic of Independence Hall.

FLAG CEREMONY

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. In restoring this Capitol Building and in preserving its art and other valued contents, Pennsylvania needs the help and inspiration of all her people and organizations. To present to you just one of these needs and a citizen group which is at work to do its share, I present the distinguished minority leader of the Pennsylvania State Senate, Senator Edward Zemprelli of Allegheny County.

SENATOR ZEMPRELLI. Thank you very much.

One of the characteristic things about human beings is that they all like to celebrate; they like to dedicate; and they like to congregate, and I am no exception, and so, therefore, I would like to begin by emphasizing how particularly special I feel today in being able to participate in these ceremonies.

This is the 75th anniversary of our Capitol Building, no question the most beautiful State capitol in the Nation. It is also the 300th anniversary of this Commonwealth and, as far as we know, the oldest continuing democracy on this continent and perhaps in the hemisphere. In my mind, we have every reason to celebrate today, and the way I see it, the reason we are celebrating is to reaffirm our heritage, to illustrate the commitment that we have to our Commonwealth's history.

In this day of our futuristic preoccupation, our technological leaps and bounds, we seem to have the focus on the future, and I think it does us a lot of good to indulge on reflecting upon the past, because I am sure all of us realize that the past is really the foundation which has shouldered our progress. That is why I am particularly pleased today to have the opportunity to introduce to you a group noteworthy of our praise and who have made an outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's historical past. The group is the 87th Civil War Regiment Reenactment Unit. They are here with us. I sincerely welcome them, and I would like to take a few moments to explain to you why.

As you know, we have exhibited throughout the rotunda here some 352 historical flags and banners of Pennsylvania. They are the original flags and the original banners our soldiers and volunteers carried in the battles of Gettysburg, Antietam, Vicksburg, and many other of the civil wars that that war unfolded. Nearly 200 of these banners were committed to their glass cases as early as the year 1915, and they remain there today, and yet at the same time that I say they remain there today, they are barely with us.

It goes without saying that these historical artifacts are in serious, advanced condition of decay and being very fragile. Many are beaten and scarred from the battles that they were in, and some of them are smoke damaged from the same battles, and others have simply deteriorated as a matter of age. But there is one notable exception, and it is the 87th Reenactment Unit whom we have to thank. You see, one of the banners that I have mentioned, here with us today, is that unit, and I would like very much to thank them, because the condition of that flag is not the same as the others. But through the efforts of these people, sufficient funds were raised to repair and recondition and to prevent further decay, and the group's effort in fact reassured this valuable piece of Commonwealth history will be with us and not crumble in the future.

And so, therefore, to you of the 87th Civil Regiment Unit, I thank you. I think it is appropriate at this time that we emulate your example. The Reenactment Unit has saved one banner for us, but there are many still decaying, and I hope to see a concerted effort on behalf of the remaining flags that otherwise will be ruined. We owe it particularly to those who will congregate in this area in the future to celebrate a similar circumstance.

And with those thoughts in mind, ladies and gentlemen, it is my pleasure to present to you the 87th Regiment Civil War Reenactment Unit. Gentlemen.

(The 87th Regiment Civil War Reenactment Group presented its colors.)

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. To the members of the 87th Regiment Reenactment Group belong our special thanks for this very fine and unselfish initiative which is an example to many others to follow. Actually, when they unfurled this flag, they found that the original regimental flag had disappeared or deteriorated completely or else been shot away. The only thing left was a piece of the fringe along the top and side with a few of the colors, so no one will ever know what that regimental flag will look like. But they found inside placed in there in 1865 this flank marker listing all the battles in which that regiment took part.

REDEDICATION STATEMENT

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. All Pennsylvanians are honored today to be host to descendants of President Theodore Roosevelt, who dedicated this Capitol on October 4, 1906. To present these guests is the honored duty of the majority leader of the State Senate, Senator Robert Jubelirer of Blair County.

SENATOR JUBELIRER. Thank you, Representative Pitts.

My friends, it is indeed a great honor for me to have the privilege of introducing our featured speaker today. And I might say, Mr. Roosevelt, as a 1951 graduate of the Theodore Roosevelt Junior High School in Altoona, Pennsylvania, I bring you special greetings from that great city and the "Roughriders" of that school.

This is indeed a historic day for all of us, and we certainly all are gathered here to hear the words and know that those of you who stand out there are standing on the very spot that Theodore Roosevelt walked in and rededicated this great, great Capitol of ours.

Our main speaker was born in 1916 in Buenos Aires, Argentina. He received his B.A. from Harvard University, where he later taught history. He also taught in the California Institute of Technology and has served as consultant to the Secretary of State, as head of the Mid-East Department of the CIA, director of government relations for Gulf Oil Corporation, and is now vice president of that company. Mr. Roosevelt holds a national security medal and is the author of several books, the most renowned of which are, "Arabs, Oil and History," "A Sentimental Safari," "Countercoup: The Struggle for the Control of Iran," certainly very topical today. He has also contributed numerous articles of international and national topics for such magazines as Harper's, the Saturday Evening Post, and Reader's Digest.

I think it is fair to say that this distinguished speaker of ours, this distinguished American, Mr. Roosevelt, has continued the family tradition in developing wide-ranging interests. I say bully, Mr. Roosevelt, and welcome.

(Standing ovation.)

MR. ROOSEVELT. Governor Thornburgh, Lieutenant Governor Scranton, Speaker Ryan, Senator Hager, Chairman Pitts, and other honorable ladies and gentlemen:

It is a great pleasure for me and my wife to be with you on this occasion. My only regret is that neither of my cousins who bear the name Theodore Roosevelt, TR Three and TR Four, could be here themselves today. My uncle, TR Junior, died in Normandy in World War II, so you will have to settle for a Kermit, who will promise to do his best to represent the family.

It is 75 years ago that my grandfather, President Theodore Roosevelt, came to Harrisburg to dedicate this, then new, State Capitol. On that occasion he said, "I do not recall any State Legislature which, in a similar length of time, has to its credit such a body of admirable legislation." I can only repeat his words and share his admiration.

It was, he pointed out, on Pennsylvania soil that the Declaration of Independence was signed and that the Constitutional Convention was held. It was in Pennsylvania that George Washington wintered at Valley Forge and, by keeping his army together during that winter, definitely turned the tide of battle in our favor. We won our independence from Great Britain here. And it was here in Pennsylvania again, as TR reminded us, that our union was preserved. In the Civil War the tide of battle turned at Gettysburg, and we were enabled to continue as one country, the United States.

TR stressed the fact that Pennsylvania epitomizes, in the mingling of many old-world—and I am sure he would now add African—races, the composition of our modern national state.

Pennsylvania has grown since that day in many important respects - in population, of course, but also in diversity of many kinds. We have a wider variety of jobs and of communications on different subjects and with different groups. In TR's day the President could talk only with, in our terms, very small groups. Radio was in its struggling infancy and television had yet to be born. His cousin, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was to be the first President to make dramatically effective use of radio.

Limited capability of communication has other implications. Not only could the President talk with, at best, very small groups; the general public was similarly restricted to their families, friends, neighbors, and fellow townfolk. A mass movement could develop only in cases of truly national emergency and then, by our standards, slowly. Written communication on normal matters and under normal circumstances had normally no great range. Word of the Spanish-American War, for example, traveled by late-20th-century standards at a notably slow pace. News of the sinking of the Lusitania, compared with the news of Pearl Harbor, crawled across the country at a snail's pace. However, World War I did arouse public demand for up-to-the-minute reportage, and it speeded up the circulation of news most dramatically.

The last paragraph of TR's speech made here 75 years ago reads as follows: "The men who are to do the work of the new epoch must be trained to have a sturdy self-respect, a power of sturdy insistence on their own rights, and with it a proud and generous recognition of their duties, a sense of honorable obligation to their fellows, which will bind them, by bands of steel, to refrain in their daily work, at home or in their business, from doing aught to any man which cannot be blazoned under the noon-day sun."

I cannot improve upon those words; I can only repeat them. And I am proud to have had this opportunity to speak to you. Thank you very much.

(Standing ovation.)

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Mr. Roosevelt, for your inspiring rededication remarks and for the glimpse into the past.

REMARKS AND PRESENTATION

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Ladies and gentlemen, I proudly present to you now the Lieutenant Governor of the Commonwealth, the Honorable William W. Scranton III.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SCRANTON. As I look down on this group today, I see assembled many friends and some of my predecessors, and I just want to say that those of us who are or have been Lieutenant Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania have been fortunate to occupy a very special perch in this building. We are located right above the rotunda between the executive and the legislative branches, both of which branches of government we have had duties in, and have had, due to that special location, an opportunity to view the comings and goings in this very grand and very lofty building which we rededicate today. And I think that my predecessors would agree with me that the comings and goings and the events of this building have sometimes been lofty and sometimes have been not so lofty, but they have indeed at all times been very human and very, reflective of what a Commonwealth is all about. And we have witnessed proud moments, and we have witnessed infamous moments, but they are all events and moments which have gone to make a very great Commonwealth and a very great history.

And so I would join with them, speak for them, and say that for those of us who have occupied that very special piece of real estate in this building, that we wish the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, this very great Commonwealth, and its citizens upon the beginning of its fourth century and upon the rededication of its State Capitol, that God may bless them in this great Commonwealth for many, many years to come.

I would like to now introduce a gentleman from Grove City, Pennsylvania, who was the 1980 Hazlitt Memorial Award winner for excellence in the arts in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Natale Rossi has designed a special commemorative plate for the rededication ceremonies of this Capitol, the significance of which is that a similar plate was designed for the commemoration dedication ceremonies 75 years ago today. Mr. Rossi.

Mr. ROSSI. I would like to present this dish to Mrs. Roosevelt.

(Plate was presented.)

REMARKS

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SCRANTON. Now it is my very great pleasure to introduce a man who occupies a very prime piece of real estate in the south part of this building. I would like to introduce a good friend, my compatriot, the Governor of Pennsylvania, Dick Thornburgh.

(Standing ovation.)

GOVERNOR THORNBURGH. Thank you, Bill.

Mr. Roosevelt, my fellow Pennsylvanians, who are truly the distinguished guests at this rededication ceremony:

Three centuries of Pennsylvania's history have seen several buildings serve as both the functional and symbolic heart of the Commonwealth. Those seats of government have been unique in several important respects. In our first Capitol, Independence Hall in Philadelphia, the government of the United States was born. Within the chambers of the old Capitol, which stood on this very ground, were drawn those laws which created Pennsylvania's advanced modes of transportation, its canals and its railroads, and which established its proud public school system. And this magnificent structure is at once a masterpiece of the architecture, painting, sculpture, and decorative arts of its age, while at the same time continuing as the living center of administration of the Commonwealth as we enter the fourth century of our history.

It is only fitting, as we celebrate our 300th birthday and the 75th anniversary of this building, that we review our achievements of the past and reflect on our aspirations of the future.

In the words of Samuel Pennypacker, then Governor, spoken during the first dedication of this building on October 4, 1906, and I quote:

The capitol is much more than the building in which the legislature holds its sessions, the courts sit in judgment, and the executive exercises his authority.

It is a concrete manifestation of the importance and power of the state and an expression of its artistic development.

This Capitol Building stands today as a visible symbol of the greatness of law, justice, and wisdom in a form of government in which men and women take counsel together for the good of society and a people.

There is no denying that we have a heritage that we must honor and preserve for generations to come. There is no denying that William Penn's vision that we may do the thing that is truly wise and just must not be allowed to fade. And there can be no denying that we must preserve this proud monument to Pennsylvania's industrial, cultural, and political leadership.

It is appropriate that we establish safeguards to assure that this living symbol of our heritage remain intact for the generations of legislators, judges, citizens, and governors who will follow. Therefore, I stand here today to reaffirm the resolve of those who are here present today on behalf of all Pennsylvanians that this Capitol shall be preserved for future generations. Presently, plans to carry out this preservation are going forward. I support those efforts and pledge this administration's commitment to work with our partners in the General Assembly to guarantee the protection of the legacy which in its eloquence surrounds us today.

Moreover, I encourage not only those of us who are privileged to toil in this building but all citizens of Pennsylvania - school children, business and labor leaders, members of the philanthropic and academic communities, and all who believe in our system of government - to consider what contributions they may make in the next several years to the preservation of this living symbol of our past, our present, and our hope for the future of William Penn's "Holy Experiment."

For government cannot, no, should not, do these things alone. In working together to pass appropriate protective legislation and then to ensure that means are found to see that the intent of that legislation is carried out, we will be able to take comfort in the knowledge that this massive and beautiful building will stand as an inspiration to all our people, encouraging them and us to continue to sharpen the vision of our founder.

On behalf of the Commonwealth, as its chief executive, I proudly join in the rededication of this Capitol Building to the continued public use and to the noble purposes for which it was designed, constructed, and originally dedicated 75 years ago. Thank you.

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Governor Thornburgh.

At the conclusion of this formal ceremony of rededication and of remembrance of our Commonwealth's heritage, each of you is invited to attend a birthday party here in the rotunda.

Any appropriate conclusion is to introduce to you some very special guests who are with us. Please hold your applause until I have concluded acknowledging everyone in each group.

The officials on the dais, in addition to the program participants, are: Senator John Stauffer of Chester County, the Senate majority whip; of Allegheny County, Senator Eugene Scanlon, the Senate minority whip; Representative Richard Cessar of Allegheny County, the House majority whip; of Bucks County, Representative James Wright, member of the House Tercentenary Committee; Representative William DeWeese of Greene County, member of the House Tercentenary Committee; and in addition, the First Lady of Pennsylvania, Ginny Thornburgh.

Will these guests and officials please stand as a group.

Seated in front as special guests today are: The Governor's Cabinet; members of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission; former Lieutenant Governor, General Daniel B. Strickler; State Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer; United States Congressmen Donald Bailey, Doug Walgren, Robert Walker, and Joseph Smith; the Honorable John Morgan Davis, former Lieutenant Governor and retired judge of Federal district court; the Honorable Ernest Kline, former Lieutenant Governor; the Honorable Martin Murray, Senator and former President pro tempore; the Honorable Kenneth B. Lee, former Speaker of the House; the Honorable Herbert Fineman, former Speaker of the House; Dauphin County Commissioners John E. Minnich, Norman P. Hetrick, and Stephen Reed; the Honorable Paul E. Doutrich, mayor of Harrisburg; and Mr. Robert H. Mason, representing the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge of Masons, which had, by the way, the honor of setting the cornerstone of the Capitol Building at the time of its construction.

Will these guests please stand as a group.

We also have with us a gentleman who was here in the Capitol 75 years ago today at the dedication ceremonies, Mr. Louis Shultz. Mr. Shultz, will you please rise.

POSTLUDE

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. At this time the Penn State University Chamber Choir and Brass Quintet will give us their closing number.

(The postlude was presented by the Pennsylvania State University Chamber Choir and Brass Quintet: "Battle Hymn of the Republic.")

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. Thank you, Penn State Chamber Choir and Brass Quintet.

The magnificent 75th anniversary birthday cake has been designed and constructed by Charles Schulz, executive director of the Harrisburg Art Association. The Harrisburg Art Association members have produced special works of art to commemorate this rededication event. Its exhibit today is on the second floor of the rotunda. Also on exhibit on the main floor of the rotunda are prints of the architect of this building, Joseph Huston's work, courtesy of the Library Company of Philadelphia.

BIRTHDAY CAKE CUTTING CEREMONY

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. To conclude this ceremony and to begin the birthday party, I now ask the following distinguished officials to descend the staircase to cut the birthday cake: Governor Dick Thornburgh, Senator Hager, and Speaker Ryan.

(Birthday cake was cut.)

REPRESENTATIVE PITTS. The cake is cut; the party is on. Thank you for being here today. Stay and have a piece of cake. Our ceremony is concluded.

PROGRAM NOTES

Today's ceremony, commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the dedication of Pennsylvania's Capitol, follows the format of the original ceremony held October 4, 1906. Pennsylvania at that time stood at its political zenith, and its new Capitol, whose elaborate ornamentation cost more than the building itself, was erected as a proud monument to Pennsylvania's industrial, cultural and political leadership.

Harrisburg celebrated with unprecedented fanfare, and a crowd of 30,000 turned out to cheer President Theodore Roosevelt, who delivered the dedicatory address. Since that day, this magnificent structure has changed but little, as thousands of elected officials and millions of visitors have passed through its immense bronze doors.

In a year that also marks Pennsylvania's Tercentenary, interest in the past and future of this architectural and governmental edifice has intensified. Appropriately, the General Assembly formed a Committee earlier this year to ensure that significant historic events are observed and historic artifacts are preserved. Meanwhile, a major renovation and expansion to preserve the Capitol's beauty while enhancing its usefulness and efficiency is commencing this year.

Today, Mr. Kermit Roosevelt Sr. appears as his distinguished grandfather's 1981 counterpart, joining Pennsylvania's governmental officials and citizenry in a rededication ceremony that significantly looks both back to the past and ahead to the future. Commemorating this event are presentations of a medal struck by the world-renowned Franklin Mint at the General Assembly's request, original 1904 engravings of the Capitol Building given by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and a plate fashioned by award-winning Pennsylvania artist Natale Rossi. The flag of the 87th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, has been restored and is being presented by members of the 87th Regiment Recruitment Group. An 81-pound birthday cake made in the shape of Pennsylvania and surmounted by a facsimile of the Capitol Dome will be cut and served immediately following the rededication ceremony.
