GENERAL COMMUNICATION

2009 WEIGHTS AND MEASURES ANNUAL REPORT

The PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following communication, which was read by the Clerk as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA
Department of Agriculture
2301 N. Cameron St.
Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408

June 2010

Dear Friend of Pennsylvania Agriculture:

On behalf of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Bureau of Ride and Measurement Standards, I am pleased to provide you with the 2009 Weights and Measures Annual Report. This comprehensive report details the activities of the Division of Weights and Measures, including inspection activities and information as required under the Consolidated Weights and Measures Act, Title 3 Pa C.S.A. Chapter 41.

Each day, weights and measures officials throughout the state work hard to ensure equity in the marketplace, assuring when consumers use weighing and measure devices - from fuel pumps to deli scales - they are getting exactly what they pay for. This is an important part of what we do as a state agency, and we remain committed to our role in protecting the integrity of transactions in the commonwealth.

Over the past several years, Governor Edward G. Rendell has made significant investments in consumer protection. In 2007, these investments brought much needed staff and equipment to the bureau to strengthen our ability to protect consumers, businesses and manufacturers throughout the state. In 2008 and 2009, these were enhanced through greater consumer outreach and new inspection tools.

Looking forward, efforts are already underway to ensure transparency and accountability in commercial activities. For the first time this year, weights and measures inspection reports are easily accessible online at www.agriculture.state.pa.us by searching "Weights & Measures." Already consumers and businesses are using this unique tool to protect themselves from inaccurate measures.

Thank you for your interest and attention to the important responsibilities of this division. It is a critical part of our efforts to keep Pennsylvania growing.

Sincerely,

RUSSELL C. REDDING
Secretary

The PRESIDENT. This report will be filed in the Library.

Today, her family came, and we had a press conference to talk about new legislation that I am going to be offering called Jennifer's Law, which would require anyone who witnesses a violent crime against someone to report it. It is simple, it is humane, and I am hoping that we can get support for it here in the Chamber.

Today with us are her mom, Denise Murphy; her stepfather, Bobby Murphy; Karl Horman; Bridget Shirley; her sister, Joy Burkholder; and Stephen Smolleck. They all joined us in Harrisburg today. I hope that you all look at this legislation and consider giving us a lot of support for it so that we do not have any more Jennifers. Thank you.

An Act designating Interstate Route I-84, within the borders of Pennsylvania, as the Fallen Trooper Memorial Highway.

Considered the third time and agreed to,

On the question, Shall the bill pass finally?

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Luzerne, Senator Baker.

Senator BAKER. Mr. President, I rise to support Senate Bill No. 1320, which would designate Interstate 84 from the city of Scranton to the New York State line as the Fallen Trooper Memorial Highway. It would honor Pennsylvania State Police officers who have given the ultimate sacrifice in protecting and providing safety to the Commonwealth and to our citizens. The designation is supported by the Pennsylvania State Police and the Pennsylvania State Troopers Association. We have lost 93 Troopers in the Commonwealth, who have given their lives in the protection of our citizens. This designation would represent a major thoroughfare and a major milestone for us to honor all of the Troopers who have died in the line of duty. So I ask my colleagues for their support of Senate Bill No. 1320. Thank you.

And the question recurring, Shall the bill pass finally?

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 357, ADOPTED

Senator PILEGGI, without objection, called up from page 9 of the Calendar, Senate Resolution No. 357, entitled:

A Concurrent Resolution congratulating the Local Government Commission on its 75th anniversary.

On the question,

Will the Senate adopt the resolution?

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mercer, Senator Robbins.

Senator ROBBINS. Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to vote for this resolution honoring the Local Government Commission for its 75th anniversary and its great service, and I would like to submit my remarks for the record.

The PRESIDENT. The remarks will be spread upon the record.

(The following prepared remarks were made part of the record at the request of the gentleman from Mercer, Senator ROBBINS:)

Mr. President, it is with great pride that I rise today to call for a positive vote on this resolution commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Pennsylvania Local Government Commission.

I know most of my colleagues are well aware of the fine work by the Commission and its staff. I have been fortunate to serve on the Commission since 1994 and have served as chairman for about 7 years, so I have had the opportunity to see the extensive amount and wide variety of work it handles.

The Local Government Commission, created in 1935, is one of the oldest agencies of its kind in the United States. The Commission holds quarterly meetings to provide a forum at which statewide local government associations can present their concerns, possible amendments to municipal codes, and other legislative proposals which they deem important to local government. Since the Commission is both bicameral and bipartisan, representatives of these associations are able to express their views before both Senate and House Members as well as Members of all four Caucuses.

As legislators, we know the characteristics of the districts we represent, but we may not be as familiar with the other areas of the Commonwealth. The Commission looks at the big picture and studies the impact of legislation and policy on local governments. Pennsylvania's 12 million residents rely on the services and facilities provided by local government, ranging from the special-purpose functions of counties, school districts, and municipal authorities in the areas of judicial administration, social welfare, education, and the provision of water and sewer services, to the more general-purpose functions of cities, boroughs, towns, and townships, such as maintenance of roads and streets, police and fire protection, and enforcement of ordinances and land-use controls.

We are a diverse Commonwealth, and our rich tapestry of local government includes 67 counties, 56 cities, 961 boroughs, 91 first class townships, 1,456 second class townships, one town, 500 school districts, and 1,534 active local authorities, and thousands of hardworking citizen officials, many of whom serve without reward, who staff these local governments.

Mr. President, for 75 years, the Local Government Commission has provided a forum for the constructive exchange of information between those local boards, authorities and commissions, and State government. This exchange of information truly helps us as State legislators develop legislation that best serves the people of our great State.

I ask my colleagues to show their support for the work of the Local Government Commission with an affirmative vote on this resolution. Thank you.

And the question recurring,

Will the Senate adopt the resolution?

A voice vote having been taken, the question was determined in the affirmative.

PETITIONS AND REMONSTRANCES

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Philadelphia, Senator Tartaglione.

Senator TARTAGLIONE. Mr. President, many of us have heard about offshore tax shelters that allow the wealthy to avoid their obligation to society. The U.S. government has been trying for years to convince the Cayman Islands to crack down on American transactions designed only to avoid payment of taxes. And who has not heard of someone putting money in a secret Swiss bank account. However, while we like to blame other countries for some of our revenue problems, the tax shelter right next door is now the most notorious in the world, the most notorious in the world.

Last year, the Tax Justice Network named the State of Delaware as the world's most secretive tax haven. The Cayman Islands finished fourth, and Switzerland third. While we have no authority to change the laws of our neighboring States, we can take steps to stop enabling them to take advantage of our working families in Pennsylvania by allowing large corporations to avoid their tax obligations. Of course, I am talking about the Delaware loophole, a tax dodge that has become so out of hand that thousands of corporate offices can occupy one floor of a small office building. It has become so ridiculous that the Cayman Islands is complaining about our government providing tax havens. It has become so ridiculous that the mom-and-pop corner stores can no longer compete.

Mr. President, no one likes to pay taxes, but the vast majority do so despite obligations to families. We have obligations to those who pay their taxes to make sure that the system is fair and that you cannot buy your way out of your obligation with paperwork and sleight of hand. Pennsylvania workers do not have a Delaware loophole. Pennsylvania families cannot set 1,000 family addresses on one floor of a Wilmington office building, and Pennsylvania small businesses cannot either. If we expect people to pay their taxes, the least we can do is assure them that the system is fair and the loopholes are closed.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Allegheny, Senator Ferlo.

Senator FERLO. Mr. President, I will try to be brief. For those constituents out there who might be listening to me, as well as my colleagues here in the Chamber, for those who really conscientiously sit in front of the TV each evening and watch Glenn Beck and Sean Hannity and some of the other conservative, if not right-wing, TV or radio talk shows and consider it like reading the Bible as gospel, you are probably not going to be interested in what I am about to talk about. There is an important documentary this evening on TV, on HBO. It is a documentary called "Gasland." I am not talking about Graceland, I am talking about "Gasland," and some may not consider this a documentary. They may consider it more a documentary in the vein of a Michael Moore film like "Sicko." Regardless, I would ask that people, regardless of their views about the drilling under the Marcellus Shale and similar types of deep well drilling, that they take the opportunity to watch this TV show this evening on HBO at 9 p.m., for those who may happen to be able to afford or get HBO.

It is an important documentary. It kind of details--it was shot by an individual who he had leased some of his land to the Marcellus Shale oil and gas interests. He then began to film their activities on his own property, and then I believe he took a trek around the country and started documenting the grassroots stories and accounts of individuals who had also leased their property, many times to speculators and folks who did not represent BP, Exxon, or Shell Oil. These were individuals who were brokers and went out and kind of multiplied the loaves and fish over the last 4 or 5 years, trying to shore up, at pretty low rates, the leasing rights for this deep well natural gas that we have come to now refer to as the Marcellus Shale. It is an interesting film, documentary, expose, whatever you want to refer to it as, but regardless of your view on the issue, I ask that people read, look at, and interpret the documentary this evening on HBO at 9 p.m.

Mr. President, in our State alone, as we know, we have had an explosion--in some cases, literally--but an explosion of deep well drilling under the Marcellus Shale here in our own Commonwealth. Why we are rushing to judgment to do such deep well drilling just because, to some extent, the technology has now presented itself to engage in this level of deep well drilling, and why it has happened so quickly in the last year and a half to 2 years, is beyond my understanding. You know, we have a God-given natural resource that has been percolating, brewing, and created below the earth's surface for the last 320 million years, and for some reason, just because the technology now presents itself for deep well drilling, we are rushing to judgment with gold in our eyes, throwing all caution to the wind, and engaging in this activity. It is disappointing. It is disheartening.

I am not opposed to appropriate drilling, now or even in the future. But there are a whole series of issues, impact issues, many of which are detrimental in nature, that we have not really thought about, reflected upon, studied, regulated, or discussed, especially with property owners and the citizens of our Commonwealth. I am proposing a bill that we have at least a 1-year moratorium, that we take a step back, that we look at a whole series of issues, and that we empower a very quick high-level commission broadly representative of the interests, including the oil and gas interests, which should be represented on the commission, and they come back with a full report. I believe strongly that this is prudent and reasonable. I do not think it is an outlandish proposal, and I ask my colleagues to please consider supporting my suggestion and Senate legislation for a 1-year moratorium.

Mr. President, as you are well aware, throughout our 67 counties in the year 2009 alone, we have 760 wells that have already been drilled in the Marcellus Shale and a total of 1,775 wells that have actually been drilled in the non-Marcellus Shale areas throughout all of the 67 counties, or at least permitted and drilled. Some of that drilling, obviously, is at lower depths than the deep well drilling of the Marcellus Shale. From January through May of 2010, this year alone, we have 1,172 permits issued and 564 wells drilled in the Marcellus Shale. They run from a high of 82 wells drilled in Washington County, just below my home district of Allegheny County; Tioga County is at 110; and a low of--an example like Elk County at one well drilled.

My legislation on the moratorium suggests that there are a number of issues that need to be resolved before we rush to judgment and continue this deep well drilling. There are significant issues involving protections, appropriate and proper protections for our rivers, our streams, and our groundwater from the drilling activities. Time does not permit me right now to recount the six or seven horrific accidents. I know five workers alone were brought to my district, to the West Bend Hospital burn unit. One worker died in West Virginia, and there have been a number of other incidents around the State involving the poisoning and contamination of rivers, streams, and adjoining property owners' drinking well water.

We have yet to resolve, although there have been a number of water and regulatory actions taken in the last 2 weeks--I know the Governor spoke yesterday, appropriately applauding the actions of the regulatory commission--but there are issues involving proper air quality regulations. There are specific issues, some of which are secret and proprietary, almost akin to the BP gulf oil industry, where they say they are not going to let us know what materials they are putting into our ocean. There are specific chemicals being used by the drilling industry, and we are not aware of what they are, including the amounts used at each well site.

There is a question about the appropriate permitting process. I think, to DEP's credit and Secretary Hanger, they have done a yeoman's job on this issue, but I do believe that there is continued debate, dialogue, and study that needs to be done on the permitting process, on exactly what the drilling and well inspections will be, exactly what the staffing levels within DEP and other State agencies are or are not, given our current budget dilemma, and other administrative responsibilities of the DEP.

These are some of the issues with which this commission should grapple.

On a local level, I am also very concerned about how liability and bonding at these well sites would occur, legally stipulated, in the event of likely drilling disasters that pose an environmental hazard or nightmare, especially recognizing that so many of these wells are in extremely remote areas. You know, they are in areas that are difficult, unless you have an all-terrain vehicle. They are very inconspicuous sites hidden in our forests and other areas very hard to drive or get to, let alone try to inspect on a regular basis.

There is a significant issue, not only raised by the organized trade union movement in this State, but others who want fair share participation in the labor market. If you visit most of the Marcellus Shale well sites, you will see a great number of license plates, but not too many from the Pennsylvania Keystone State. You will see license plates from Oklahoma, Texas, Arizona. Whether or not those are undocumented workers, I do not know, but it would suggest that this notion that somehow there is this big boon of employment for our own workers is illusionary at best, and I am concerned that we have not worked through the Department of Labor and Industry in our State with our own trade union organizations, all of whom have excellent apprenticeship programs. So again, the job issue and the lack thereof for Pennsylvania residents is a concern to me.

I am also concerned that we have not really evaluated the financial impacts to the host counties and smaller municipalities involving inadequate truck routes. Hundreds and hundreds of trucks are needed for the contaminated water and/or the transport of this contaminated material. There is no local share. At least with the gaming industry, the counties and the cities--like my own, Allegheny County, Pittsburgh, and others around the State--did benefit from some of the local share match under the Gaming Fund. There should be a similar benefit accruing to local host communities that have to put up with this traffic.

Another issue is the availability of emergency medical support teams, many of whom have not been trained to deal with gas and polluted water and workers who, God forbid, experience burns in remote areas, and whether or not they have a Lifeflight helicopter and ambulances. You know, this is not thought out. This is not prepared. We are not prepared for this. I think it is inappropriate.

There is also another scary issue, and to my friends on the aisle opposite, who always get up and talk about their conservative values, why some of them are proposing to allow this industry to have de facto eminent domain powers is beyond my understanding and comprehension. This industry wants the right to have de facto eminent domain. They want the ability that if they control a couple of leasing sites in a large acreage area, they want the right to force the other property owners to give up their property rights. Why the Republican Majority is supporting that is just incredulous to me. I will certainly fight that tooth and nail. I have no objection to eminent domain for legitimate public purposes - parks, lands, libraries, roadways - but not to steal someone else's private property only to give it to Shell Oil Company. I would ask that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, in both Houses, please think about and deliberate on that issue.

For all those issues and a lot more, we need this moratorium. I ask folks to watch "Gasland" this evening, and I am planning to have a virtual town meeting on this issue of the Marcellus Shale. I will be inviting the industry to participate in that town meeting. Mr. Morgan O'Brien, who was an excellent CEO and president of Duquesne Light, has agreed to participate. Obviously, I do not share some of his views, but I think his views are legitimate and need to be part of the debate and dialogue.

But please, Mr. President, we need to take a step back. Let us think about what we are doing. We already have 700, 800, 900 wells underway, drilling, zapping out this natural resource. It is not even taxed. It has been suggested that we are losing over $50 million so far by having not had an extraction or wellhead tax. That issue needs to be resolved as well.

So again, Mr. President, thank you for the extra time. Watch "Gasland" tonight on HBO at 9 p.m. I know you and I are both going to be glued to that TV screen this evening.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Senator Patricia H. Vance) in the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Philadelphia, Senator Hughes.

Senator HUGHES. Madam President, my apologies to my good friend and colleague, the chairwoman of the Committee on Public Health and Welfare. I want to make sure that at 9 p.m. tonight—I have HBO services—that I am watching HBO this evening so I can see exactly to what my good friend, Senator Ferlo, is referring.

Madam President, as we get closer and closer to resolving, hopefully on time, the budget process here in the Commonwealth, I was in the Rotunda this morning with Governor Rendell; several Members of the House of Representatives; my colleague, Senator Leach; and coming all the way up from Washington, D.C., and the United States Senate, our good friend and soon to be the senior Senator for the State of Pennsylvania, our Commonwealth, Senator Robert Casey; but most importantly, with about 200 or so individuals from various public schools all across the Commonwealth, members of school boards, teachers, administrators, and most importantly, students, several hundred, with maybe the largest phalanx of cameras that I have ever seen at a Rotunda event, and we have seen a lot of them over the years.

The conversation, Madam President, referred to maintaining a commitment, a strong commitment to the funding of public education in the Commonwealth, and I sat there and listened intently to the comments of all of the speakers. And as I said earlier, I had the good fortune to hear my good friend, and a good friend to all of us, I think, in the Senate, Senator Casey, speak so glowingly about the importance of funding public education, especially in crucial and difficult times like the ones that we are in right now.

While I was listening to everyone, I thought about this great record that we have been able to accumulate working collectively with the Governor's Office, both sides of the Senate, both sides of the House Chamber working together, the great education successes that we have had in the Commonwealth. I cannot say this enough with respect to the larger issue, but we are the only State in the nation where test scores have gone up at every grade level and in every subject matter. We are the only State in this nation that can boast that incredible success, and that is something of which we should all be proud. That is also something that we should really consider as we figure out how we are going to resolve this very, very serious budget crisis that we are in.

I take some additional pride, Madam President, in reviewing the release that was presented by our CEO of the Philadelphia School District this past week, Dr. Arlene Ackerman, when she released the reports and statistics that for the eighth consecutive year, test scores have gone up. PSSA test scores have gone up in the city of Philadelphia for the eighth consecutive year, marking progress that has never been seen before in our great city and matching the progress that, I think, is unprecedented in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Scores are going up at a State level. Scores are going up in the Philadelphia School District. It is unprecedented in the history of this State.

So as I sat there and listened to all of the speakers—the students, the teachers, the school board administrators, and everyone concerned, the advocacy groups, our United States Senator, our Governor, who has done such a good job in terms of addressing the issue of public education—I thought about what it is that we must prioritize, what it is that we must focus on, and how we must come to closure with respect to this budget process. I thought about the incredible investments and how we need to keep that going. That is not something that we should fall away from, and in fact, it is something that we should rush toward and figure out how we can creatively, thoughtfully keep those successes going, because they impact directly on the economics and the work that is going on right now. But it also, Madam President, as everyone has to agree, will have a significant impact on the future of our Commonwealth.

An early investment now in strong schools has a great return on that investment as these young people grow in their lives. And there is nothing, nothing as exciting as seeing the light turn on in the mind and the heart and the soul of an educated child, where they really start to see how they can turn their dreams into reality by having a strong, solid education.

I also thought, Madam President—and I have talked about this before—about so many millions of people in this Commonwealth who are, if you will, living on the margin, living in a very, very difficult time, and living in very difficult circumstances. Madam President, you look around, and just about every county in our Commonwealth is at or near 10 percent unemployment. That is very troubling. The economy is kind of turning itself around nationally, but it has not quite trickled down to the average working person. It has not quite trickled down to those individuals who have businesses, and especially small businesses. They have not quite felt that turnaround yet, and so consequently, people are searching desperately, desperately for jobs.

We sent out a newsletter this past week, discussing the legislation that both Senator Tartaglione and I introduced, Madam President, talking about jobs bills and the opportunity to put 40,000 people back to work. And the calls coming into our offices, Madam President, asked, where are the jobs? They did not quite understand that it is just the legislation that was introduced and that we have to work that legislation to get to an end. They were so desperate for work, desperate for employment, that they thought that the bills, in fact, had become law, the law of the land.

We are working toward that end, but that indicated to us, in my district office and Senator Tartaglione's office, that the need and the desperation that exists in so many circumstances, with so many families in so many communities. We look across the numbers, Madam President, and we see the skyrocketing rates for foreclosures on people's homes. Even with one of the best programs in the nation, Madam President, our home program to keep people in their homes, to reformat their foreclosures, or to work on their mortgage situations, to get folks out of a deficit situation, we are still seeing foreclosures at dramatically high levels.

That means people, again, are living on the margin, and we have to respond to their needs. We cannot turn away from the need, Madam President. We look at the adultBasic program, our healthcare program, which has been a lifeline for so many millions of people over the years, we see now that in this time of desperation with unemployment high, with foreclosures high, with people living on the margin in terms of being able to get by from day to day, we look and see there are over 369,000 people who are on the waiting list for adultBasic. And those are just the people who made the conscious decision to apply and get on the waiting list. I dare say there are millions more, millions more who are waiting to get assistance. While the marginal changes start to take effect from the national healthcare reform program, which will not come fully into effect until 2014, there still remains hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of people in this Commonwealth who are desperate for healthcare services and cannot quite find a way to get there.

We cannot forget these people. We cannot sit idly by and make our decisions in a vacuum and not understand that there are real people who are impacted in this Commonwealth, and they are impacted by the work that we do and that the budget that we discuss is not just numbers, but there are numbers attached to real lives and services that many of these people need.

So when Senator Tartaglione stands up, and Senator Ferlo stands up, and I stand up, and others stand up and talk about the issue of trying to close the Delaware loophole and talk about the issue of trying to find the resources from Marcellus Shale taxes--we have probably the largest reserve of shale in the nation here in our Commonwealth. National oil companies, international oil companies are coming to Pennsylvania and dropping $3 billion, $4 billion, $5 billion, $7 billion, billions of dollars to purchase the rights, and the companies who started this drilling in Pennsylvania are starting to just soak up and soup up all of these companies, spending billions of dollars. It is because we have the reserves. It is because we have not just the potential energy to heat and light the entire Commonwealth, but we have the resources available financially to probably fix, in a dramatic way, significant portions of our budget problem.

Yet, we do not get the resources from that. We let these businesses just go and do whatever it is that they want to do, coming in, utilizing their heavy equipment, destroying local roads and highways as they go through their process. We do not get the resources from them that we need. We are one of a few States in the nation that chooses not to have any assessments or taxes on any of these companies that do their drilling in this Commonwealth.

And while we are letting those resources sit at the table; while we are failing to close the Delaware loophole, which could probably secure hundreds of millions of dollars for this Commonwealth; while we refuse to deal with the issue of tobacco taxes, especially non-cigarette tobacco taxes, we are the only State in the nation that does not provide any taxes on these non-cigarette tobacco products. We let those resources sit there when they should be coming to the Commonwealth, and we contemplate cutting programs, not investing in education, cutting the programs that are the lifeline to millions of people in this Commonwealth.

That is not right. That does not represent the best in us, Madam President. In many respects, it represents, I think, the worst in us, that we cannot figure out a way to match the cries that exist of the people in this State with the resources that could potentially help them, and not, in fact, hurt the Commonwealth. Probably, in a good situation, it makes this Commonwealth stronger - a bottom line, budget-wise, that yields the investments and the resources that come from these potential areas, and a healthier citizenry, a healthier population of the Commonwealth, a healthier people in this State.

In addition to that fact, there are several reserves that we can draw from, one-time extractions of these reserves and a few pots of dollars that exist in the State that can help put all of this together. People are suffering, and we do have resources. We cannot overlook the opportunities that exist to draw dollars in, to address the needs of the people and not upset the apple cart of the economic conditions of this Commonwealth.

Those folks to whom I refer, the children who are doing better academically; the folks who are living on the margin across this State, probably 60 percent of the people who are in this Commonwealth are living on the margin of either self-sufficiency or moving toward poverty; those 10-, 12-, 15-, and 20-percent pockets of people who are unemployed; the growing numbers of people who are suffering through foreclosures; the 369,000 people in this Commonwealth, Madam President, who are waiting on the adultBasic program, waiting for healthcare, waiting for help, none of those individuals, not one of those individuals who are not working right now, who have gone through a foreclosure, who are on the adultBasic waiting list, none of those individuals caused the economic conditions that we are in right now. Not one of them.

Yet, they suffer. Yet, they suffer. Their children suffer, their families suffer, their neighborhoods suffer, and their communities suffer. They suffer. They did not cause this problem, and we cannot lose sight of that. At the very least, from a moral perspective, we cannot lose sight of the fact that they sit there suffering from a problem that they did not create. We have resources. We need to go get those resources.

We need to close the Delaware loophole, as Senator Tartaglione pointed out. We need to address the Marcellus Shale, as Senator Ferlo talked about. We need to address the issue of other tobacco products and secure the resources. The only State in the nation that does not secure resources from other tobacco products is Pennsylvania. We need to get those resources and put them in this budget and direct them to invest in helping people, everyday people who did not cause the problem. That is the best in us, Madam President. That is the best in us.

Hopefully, in the next 10 days, as we move toward closure in this budget crisis that we are in--and there is no question about it, there is a budget crisis--hopefully, as we move toward closure in this, we will reach for the best in us and make sure that we put the people first and respond to their needs, because they need that from us.

Thank you, Madam President.
