1 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Having the hour of 2 1:00 arrived, the House Commerce Committee will 3 now come to order. We have a public hearing today
4 on payday lending. For those folks that don't 5 know what payday lending is, it's different stores 6 that have grown within the last few years. What 7 they do is they give loans, small loans, like $300
8 to $500 within a week. They do charge a higher 9 percent and they have some additional fees other 10 than banks. Banks have now a tradition of not 11 being interested in giving the loans for $300 to 12 $500.

13 We have a number of people testifying
14 here today to hear what payday lending 15 institutions do. I didn't have any of those 16 payday stores until within the last two years up 17 in Northeast Pennsylvania. So it will be 18 interesting to hear the different ones that have 19 comments today at the hearing.

20 The first person to testify is Beth 21 McConnell. She's the director of PennPIRG and 22 PennPIRG Educational Fund which is a consumer 23 group. Beth, thank you for coming here today and 24 being with us. You may start at your own 25 convenience. Thank you.

1 MS. MCCONNELL: Good afternoon. Thank 2 you for having me. It's good to see you all. My 3 name, again, is Beth McConnell and I'm the 4 director of Pennsylvania Public Interest Research
5 Group, PennPIRG. PennPIRG is a non-partisan,
6 non-profit consumer advocacy organization. It 7 represents several thousand citizens and members 8 across the state.

9 I thank you, of course, for giving me
10 the opportunity to comment this afternoon on 11 payday lending and also offer our perspective as 12 to how to protect consumers from being trapped 13 under unmanageable debt which often occurs within 14 this fringe banking industry.

15 Of course, we have all seen the 16 advertisements that promise quick cash until 17 payday or quick financial fixes, just fill out a 18 few simple forms and short-term cash flow problems 19 seemingly solved. But as the old adage goes, if 20 it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.
21 And certainly it is in this case. Payday lenders
22 hook consumers into a cycle of unmanageable debt 23 as borrowers, saddled with outrageous fees, take 24 out new loans to pay off the old and so on and so 25 on.

1 This Committee has considered some 2 measures in the past that aim to regulate the 3 industry to allegedly protect consumers. However, 4 PennPIRG believes that those measures will not 5 achieve that goal, rather will legitimize the 6 payday lending industry and its brand of loan
7 sharking.

8 We urge this Committee to protect 9 consumers by cracking down on the lenders'
10 questionable legal standing by passing
11 anti-brokering legislation, for example, as well
12 as passing resolutions to urge the State Attorney, 13 General as well as the Federal Deposit Insurance 14 Corporation, the FDIC, to crack down on the 15 lenders' arrangements with out-of-state banks 16 which allows them to operate.

17 This is how it works. Payday lenders 18 particularly prey on working consumers who are 19 living paycheck to paycheck. They offer loans 20 usually up to $500 against a future payroll or 21 government benefits check. Typically, the 22 consumer will write a check for $230, for example, 23 to borrow $200 for about 2 weeks which is usually 24 until their next payday.

25 So the actual cost of that loan for

1 two weeks is $30; in other words, an annual 2 percentage rate of 390 percent. For comparison,
3 some of the higher APRs on credit cards are less 4 than 24 percent and Pennsylvania law already 5 capped small loans at 23.75 percent APR.

6 Now, consumers who are desperate 7 enough to visit a payday lender often find there's 8 not enough money on payday to cover both the 9 principal of the loan as well as the finance 10 charges on top of that loan. In that case, the 11 consumer will usually pay then just the finance 12 charge, the $30 or other fees, and roll it over 13 until the next paycheck, so two weeks later, thus, 14 incurring additional finance charges during that 15 time period. So that would bring the total 16 finance charge for a $200 one-month loan to $60.

17 As is usually the case, of course, two 18 weeks later on the next payday, the consumer finds 19 that they are unable to pay the principal and the 20 fees and then continue rolling it over time and 21 time and time again until becoming mired in 22 unmanageable debt.

23 That is exactly what the payday
24 lenders bank on. I will reference this later in 25 my testimony but about half of the customers in

1 one study were -- actually, about 20 percent of 2 the customers comprised about half of the total 3 transactions for a business. So they do rely on 4 these repeat customers.

5 Now, one borrower actually told the 6 National Consumer Law Center that he paid nearly 7 $20,000 in fees for about $3,000 in loans. As a 8 member of the military, this particular customer 9 was a prime target for payday lenders. He was 10 lower income, supporting a family, in a pinch for 11 cash and also guaranteed a paycheck. In this 12 case, this consumer actually filed for bankruptcy
13 after rolling over loans with nine different 14 lenders over the course of six years.

15 While his experience is certainly 16 extreme it's not at all unique. The Center for 17 Responsible Lending estimates that 91 percent of 18 all payday loans are made to borrowers with five 19 or more loans per year. This same report 20 estimated chronic payday borrowing, over four 21 loans per year, cost Americans $3.4 billion 22 annually.

23 Now, unlike conventional lenders,
24 payday lenders do not assess a borrower's ability 25 to repay the loan. The only thing that you're

1 asked to see is proof that you actually have a
2 checking account and a steady income; but in no 3 case do the payday lenders actually ask what your 4 other debts or responsibilities are. So they have 5 absolutely no idea whether or not you're capable 6 of repaying this debt. And that is, according to 7 the Department of US Housing and Urban 8 Development, one of the characteristics of 9 predatory lending.

10 So that means that payday lenders are,
11 by taking a blind eye, knowingly extending credit 12 to people who cannot afford it. The benefits of 13 that blind lending is certainly solely in payday
14 lenders' corner as those who cannot afford to pay 15 and forced to roll over and otherwise extend their 16 loans giving the lender the captive fee payer.

17 The FDIC has highlighted concerns with 18 the soundness of the payday lenders by stating, 19 quote, the combination of the borrower's limited 20 financial capacity, the unsecured nature of the 21 credit and the limited underwriting analysis of 22 the borrower's ability to repay pose substantial 23 credit risk for insured depository institutions.

24 Payday lenders are operating on shaky
25 legal ground in Pennsylvania. State usury law

1 caps small loans at -- interest rates or APR is at 2 23.75 percent for licensed lenders. In fact,
3 former Pennsylvania Attorney General Mike Fisher
4 brought actions against three companies for making 5 payday loans in violation of those state limits
6 effectively shutting them down a few years ago.

7 However, there are a number of 8 companies -- actually, I think about ten in 9 total -- that are able to escape state law by 10 partnering with out-of-state banks, thus, are not 11 subject to Pennsylvania rules under current FDIC 12 guidelines.

13 One example, National Cash Advance,
14 which is owned by Advance America, when I most 15 recently checked, they are making their loans 16 through Bankwest of South Dakota. That was after 17 the Comptroller of the Currency shut down its 18 former payday lending partner for its unsound 19 practices. There has been regulatory action at 20 the Federal level. The Comptroller of the 21 Currency, the Office of Thrift Supervision and the 22 Federal Reserve have shut down most of these 23 payday lenders.

24 Again, just about ten state-chartered 25 FDIC supervised banks are the only financial

1 institutions that we know of that are partnering
2 with pawn chains and check cashers and payday
3 lenders to offer these short-term, high-interest
4 loans.

5 Other states have taken a very
6 critical view of payday lending. Maryland enacted 7 an anti-brokering law to give regulators the 8 authority to enforce the small loan rate caps in 9 their state. That's, again, with companies that 10 are partnering with out-of-state banks. North 11 Carolina permitted its four-year experiment with 12 payday lending to sunset since that state's 13 banking commissioner showed that many consumers 14 were becoming mired in debt despite efforts to 15 clamp down on repeat borrowing.

16 Georgia Governor Sonny Perdue just 17 recently signed legislation that prohibits payday 18 lenders from operating in the state outside of its 19 existing usury laws. Just last week the former 20 Governor of Georgia, Roy Barnes, who is now in 21 private practice as an attorney, filed a lawsuit
22 against 60 payday lenders in the state to shut 23 them down and seek penalties for violating the 24 law.

25 I would like to also, though, share

1 some of Florida's experience with payday lenders.
2 That state enacted legislation in 2001 that aims
3 to do some of the very similar things that House
4 Bill 2150 aims to do, such as limiting rollovers
5 and preventing multiple loans to a single consumer 6 at a given time as well as limiting fees.

7 Unfortunately, the legislation did
8 little to protect consumers from getting hooked 9 into a cycle of debt and it certainly allowed the 10 industry to flourish in the state. Among other 11 things, the legislation actually required the 12 creation of a database tracking system whereby the 13 payday lenders actually have to report to this 14 database system how many consumers took out loans, 15 for what amount, for what term.

16 It was that report that the company
17 Veritec Solutions, which operates a database
18 system, submitted a report to the Florida
19 Legislature and the findings I'm about to go 20 through come from that report. I have enclosed a 21 copy of one of the pages in my testimony.

22 For example, first of all, Florida law
23 attempts to limit the number of loans that a 24 customer is extended by requiring a 24-hour 25 cooling off period between loans. But despite

1 that, of course, chronic borrowing is continuing.

2 The report shows that on average
3 consumers took out 7.6 loans during a 12-month
4 period. Alarminglly, there were over 37,000
5 customers that had over 20 loans or more in a 6 12-month period. As many as 5,640 of them took 7 out 26 loans within a year. Similarly, another
8 report, a separate report from Iowa regulators
9 show that the average consumer in 2003 had 12.31 10 loans at the same exact lender and almost half of 11 those customers had 12 or more loans in 2003 at 12 the same lender.

13 The Florida report also demonstrates 14 that repeat and chronic borrowing, again, as I 15 mentioned earlier, is part of the industry's 16 business model. Thus, PennPIRG would argue that 17 it's unrealistic to expect the industry believes 18 that any sort of regulation of the manner being 19 discussed will truly limit their ability to suck 20 consumers into a cycle of debt. For example, the 21 20.5 percent of customers who took out more than 22 12 loans per year account for 50 percent of the 23 industry's total transactions.

24 The Florida legislation also limits
25 fees to 10 percent of the loan and that's not an

1 annual percentage rate. It's 10 percent of the 2 face value of the loan plus a $5 transaction fee.
3 And that's certainly not eliminating the usurious 4 rates.

5 On average, the annual percentage rate
6 for payday loans in this report is 283 percent.
7 That's certainly below the industry standard of 8 over 400 percent nationwide. But we would argue 9 that getting ripped off a little less than Florida
10 is certainly not a measure of consumer protection 11 or something you should necessarily be proud of or 12 strive for.

13 I do hope the Committee keeps in mind
14 that the legislation that's before the Committee, 15 House Bill 2150, would actually permit annual 16 percentage rates of as much as over 400 percent 17 for a two week loan. Some have argued that 18 regulating the industry could stop its slow 19 growth. But Florida's experience has been the 20 opposite.

21 Since enactment of the bill, the 22 industry has grown, as has its customer base.
23 From November of 2002 to October of 2003, the 24 estimated annual increase in active provider
25 locations in Florida was 15.3 percent while total

1 registered customers increased by over 40 percent
2 during that same time period.

3 The legislation also aims to prohibit 4 lenders from extending loans to consumers with an 5 already outstanding loan with themselves or with 6 another provider. In the initial implementation 7 of the law, the lender has to rely on the 8 consumer's good faith just to sign a statement
9 saying, I confirm that I don't have another 10 outstanding loan. Of course, the lenders own good 11 faith is to check their own records. When that 12 was a voluntary system, of course, it failed.

13 The report showed that the number of 14 customers with multiple transactions was 16
15 percent in the initial review or over 19,000 16 customers. Close to about 78 percent of them had 17 two loans open at the same time -- again, that's 18 close to 15,000 customers -- and about 16.8 19 percent had 3 open at one time, etc., etc. It was 20 only when a mandatory system of reporting and 21 verifying in the state database did the number of 22 multiple loans actually reduce to about 2,800, now 23 2,800 customers with multiple loans.

24 So the provisions that are within 25 House Bill 2150 we believe are inadequate to 1 protect consumers from payday lending. We think 2 that they will have the opposite intention and 3 actually legitimize the industry in Pennsylvania 4 and give them legal cover at a time when we should 5 be doing the opposite, cracking down on the 6 lenders.

7 As I mentioned, in addition to 8 permitting APRs in excess of 400 percent for a 9 two-week loan, the bill which most recently we had 10 heard was supported by the payday lending
11 industry. Of course, I'm sure we will hear more 12 details about later today. But it will not 13 prevent successive loans whereby the borrower pays 14 off the first loan but immediately borrows again 15 to stay afloat until his or her next payday.

16 While the bill does require that 17 lenders offer repayment plans after the fourth 18 successive loan, the provision will do little to 19 help consumers escape from debt. To being with, 20 the rules for offering the payment plan are 21 somewhat vague and weak, leaving it up to 22 interpretation by the lender how the plan should 23 be offered. Most likely, we will see some fine 24 print on the bottom of some contract.

25 But also by simply steering consumers

1 into waiting 24 hours between loans, lenders can 2 avoid the requirement of having to offer the 3 payment plan at all. As we saw in Florida, even a 4 24-hour limit does not deter chronic and repeat 5 borrowing.

6 Proponents of payday lending have 7 argued that the practice offers cash-strapped 8 consumers help in emergency situations. But 9 payday loans are creating more financial trouble
10 than they are solving for most consumers. Other 11 options do exist for consumers and more can 12 certainly be explored. Even cash advances on 13 credit cards, small loans from a credit union, 14 even paying bills late and paying late fees or 15 even paying bounced check fees are sometimes much 16 cheaper solutions for consumers who are stuck in 17 between paychecks.

18 We urge the Committee to reject any 19 legislation that permits payday lenders from 20 operating outside small loan rate caps in 21 Pennsylvania. Instead, we urge this Committee to 22 pass anti-brokering legislation that would 23 prohibit the renting of out-of-state bank charters
24 that allow lenders to skirt Pennsylvania usury 25 laws.

1 Again, we would also like to urge this 2 Committee to urge the FDIC to use its regulatory 3 powers to end the practice of allowing payday
4 lenders to use bank powers and undermine states'
5 authority to uniformly regulate small loan 6 companies and enforce usury laws. I would be 7 happy to take any questions.

8 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you, Director
9 McConnell, for the information. You're a 10 consumer. You want a loan. Let's say your 11 refrigerator breaks down on Monday. So you want 12 to replace that the same day. So you go in and 13 you say to the payday lender, I want a loan for 14 $500. What happens next?

15 MS. MCCONNELL: You need to write a 16 check to the payday lender for $500 plus finance 17 charges which are usually, in most cases, $15 per 18 $100 borrowed. This legislation actually allows 19 for $17.50 per $100 borrowed. So you write a 20 check for 500 plus those fees.

21 The payday lender will then hold on to 22 that check until the term of the loan expires
23 which is usually 14 days. And on that 14th day, 24 you need to either come back in with cash for the 25 500 plus the fees or the lender will deposit that

1 check. Most likely, if they deposit that check, 2 it bounces because very few people who are that 3 cash strapped can afford to pay those high finance
4 charges. So the consumer will then roll the loan 5 over, incurring another set of fees and extending 6 the time at which they have to pay it, repeating 7 the cycle.

8 CHAIRMAN HASAY: What collateral does 9 the payday lender have?

10 MS. MCCONNELL: Just your check.

11 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Just that check?

12 MS. MCCONNELL: You need to provide 13 some sort of proof that you actually do have an 14 income and a checking account such as a pay stub 15 or, again, being able to write a check proves that 16 you have a checking account. But the lender 17 doesn't do a credit check on you necessarily with 18 a major credit bureau such as Experian or 19 TransUnion. They don't assess your ability to 20 repay by asking you to fill out a form stating how 21 much other debt you have.

22 Again, I think not even checking with 23 your credit bureau to see what your credit
24 standing is like is evidence of it being predatory 25 borrowing. We will look aside and look the other

1 way and not assess whether or not you can actually 2 pay this loan like most banks and credit cards
3 already do because they are relying on the fees, 4 those repeat fees and the defaults in order to 5 sustain the industry.

6 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Your employer doesn't 7 send your paycheck to the payday lender?

8 MS. MCCONNELL: No, not at all. You 9 write a personal check to the lender that they 10 then hold as collateral until the term of the 11 loan. Again, they can either cash that check on 12 the 14th day or you can come back to the lender 13 and give them cash or some other -- usually, it's 14 cash. I don't know, cash or check.

15 CHAIRMAN HASAY: On the 14th day, what 16 if they don't show up?

17 MS. MCCONNELL: Then the lender can 18 cash the check and if it bounces, under current 19 law, you can be prosecuted under criminal bad 20 check laws. This legislation aims to shield
21 consumers from the criminal penalties. It does 22 allow for civil penalties but not criminal unless 23 the consumer knowingly closed the account before 24 the loan was actually arranged. But it doesn't 25 necessarily help the consumer who could be

1 prosecuted criminally for writing bad checks on 2 all the other -- checks that they wrote on their 3 account from the bank that will also bounce as a 4 result.

5 CHAIRMAN HASAY: North Carolina, in 6 your statement, did they close these stores?

7 MS. MCCONNELL: Many of the stores
8 have closed since the law sunsetted. However, 9 many stores still operate also as a result of 10 renting out-of-state bank charters. That's what's 11 happening. In most states that have actually, 12 again, eliminated payday lending, the lenders are 13 avoiding those laws by partnering with 14 out-of-state banks.

15 However, some states are challenging
16 that arrangement in court now. Litigation has 17 been pending. Some of the other folks that are 18 testifying today may be able to comment on the 19 details of that. There is also some question 20 about whether or not the FDIC, unless they 21 expressly prohibit a certain practice, can -- 22 well, let me take a step back.

23 There is some question about whether 24 or not a state-chartered bank can be subject to 25 different rules than a federally-chartered bank.

1 Federally-chartered banks are not allowed to 2 engage in payday lending. State-chartered banks 3 are allowed to, again, because they are under 4 FDIC. There is some question, some legal question 5 about whether or not such different rules can 6 exist and, if not, it gives the ability of 7 attorneys to actually close down payday lenders
8 rather than the rent-a-bank arrangements.

9 The point I guess that I want to make 10 with all of this is that the lenders are operating 11 on very shaky legal ground and the reason why they 12 want regulation in Pennsylvania is because it 13 legitimizes the industry and shields them from 14 further litigation which they may not win.

15 We are really concerned about moving 16 in any direction that, again, gives legitimacy to 17 an industry that really we should be shutting down 18 unless, of course, they are required to meet the 19 same rules that banks are required to meet in 20 offering small loans.

21 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you very much
22 for your testimony. Some of the members may have 23 questions. The gentleman from Schuylkill County, 24 Mr. Allen.

25 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: Thank you, Mr:

1 Chairman. I am not a proponent or an opponent to 2 this bill as it is drafted but I have a question
3 for you that goes to the heart of the issue here.
4 If we do not do something to correct the situation
5 and the FDIC bans out-of-state banks from issuing 6 licenses or whatever you want to call them so that 7 there is no way to get a payday check possible, 8 aren't we really just turning to loan sharking 9 then as the only way open for a person to get an 10 emergency check?

11 MS. McCONNELL: I would argue that 12 what is happening now with payday lenders is a 13 form of semi-legal loan sharking as it is. I do 14 agree that we need to do something to deal with 15 the industry. Again, we would argue that shutting 16 them down on making them abide to our own state 17 laws is the best thing to do.

18 But, of course, we can do more to help
19 consumers that are struggling. We can do a better 20 job of educating consumers about financial 21 management, about other options that exist, again,
22 as I highlighted earlier. Even using your credit 23 card or bounced check fees sometimes are better, 24 not that we would encourage people to write bad
25 checks. Although, that's exactly what the lenders

1 do. I think the best that we can do as 2 policymakers and as regulators is try and solve 3 the problems that consumers are facing rather than 4 legitimize an industry that's causing them harm.

5 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: I understand
6 your testimony. But my great concern is if we 7 don't step forward and do something in one way or 8 another, that the day the person needs the excess 9 cash, he's going to go to the street corner for it 10 and if he goes to the street corner for it, the 11 rates are not going to be 25 percent. They are 12 going to be 40 and 50 percent and they are not 13 going to stop loaning him the money because that's 14 what a loan shark does.

15 I agree with you on the one premise,
16 that the rates are extremely high. But my concern 17 is, if we don't put a control and we go to an open 18 market system, then people will find those -- and 19 I'll use the word loan shark -- to do their job
20 and get their money. And that's what my concern 21 is.

22 If we're going to ban this and walk
23 away from it, my major concern in this whole issue 24 is then we are going to have a loan shark, whether 25 it's in my urban community that I represent or

1 Philadelphia or Pittsburgh or Harrisburg, they are 2 going to be available. And they are going to be 3 willing to lend that money and they will be 4 willing to take the money back in any way they 5 can. And that's what my great concern is on this 6 issue.

7 MS. MCCONNELL: If loan sharks are 8 offering 40 or 50 percent, that's a better deal
9 than payday lenders are offering now. But I
10 recognize your concern. There will always be that 11 element of society that will be hard for us to 12 control and law enforcement should do its best to 13 clamp down on those illegal practices.

14 I think the majority of payday lending 15 consumers -- I don't know that the majority of 16 them will necessarily seek out those sorts of loan 17 sharks, street corner loan sharks. I think the 18 majority of them are probably not part of that. I 19 don't even think they would know where to go 20 necessarily to find a loan shark. There may be 21 some.

22 But most of these consumers are 23 average working consumers. Again, members of the 24 military are one of the primary targets for payday
25 lenders. They can actually go to the military

1 itself to get loans at a much better rate than the 2 payday lenders. I think that's almost always 3 going to exist but I don't necessarily believe we 4 are going to see such an increase in that type of 5 activity if we simply protect consumers.

6 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: Thank you.

7 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Beth, in those other
8 states where some of the payday lending stores
9 were closed or restricted, did the banking
10 industry come in and say, well -- because if you 11 want to borrow money from a bank, you have to 12 borrow from some banks at least $3,000. Did the 13 banking industry in those other states say, well, 14 we're going to give $500 loans out now?

15 MS. MCCONNELL: That's a good
16 question. I don't know the answer to that. I can 17 look into it and get back to you. I do know that 18 there have been some experiments at smaller banks 19 and credit unions of doing more small loans than 20 previously as a community service to avoid payday 21 lenders. I don't know an awful lot about how many 22 of them are out there or what their success is 23 like. But I can look into that and get back to 24 you. Some of the other testifiers may also know 25 the details of that.

1 CHAIRMAN HASAY: We may have the 2 Secretary of Banking here and we will probably ask
3 him that question. He may be here today. I know
4 he's in State College and on his way here. So 5 we're hoping to hear from Secretary Schenek. The 6 gentleman from Westmoreland, Mr. Tangretti, has a
7 question.

8 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Thank you,
9 Mr. Chairman. Good afternoon. Beth, just for my 10 own edification and for everybody else's, what's 11 the history here of payday lending? This seems to 12 kind of just popped up over the last few years.
13 Is that accurate or have I just not seen it?

14 MS. MCCONNELL: We are definitely
15 seeing an explosive growth in the industry over 16 the last few years. I don't know exactly why 17 other than potentially this rent-a-bank
18 arrangement that's becoming more and more popular 19 which is allowing them to skirt usury laws. And 20 that's one of the reasons why we're also looking 21 for legislation in multiple states -- it's not 22 just Pennsylvania -- to, again, shield them from 23 the crack down.

24 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Take me
25 through once again, if you would -- you mentioned

1 that Mike Fisher, in his role as Attorney General, 2 did close down a number of these but there are 3 still some operating as a result of their 4 relationship with other chartered banks. Is that 5 accurate?

6 MS. MCCONNELL: From my understanding,
7 other state-chartered banks.

8 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Why is it
9 that that makes it legal as opposed to illegal 10 versus what Mike Fisher did?

11 MS. MCCONNELL: Federal law does 12 preempt states in many cases, not just in this 13 case but in many cases, from establishing certain 14 rules or regulations to protect consumers outside 15 of what another state does.

16 For example, if a bank is 17 headquartered and registered in Delaware and 18 Delaware law allows for small loan rates of a 19 thousand percent or has no limit and the bank is 20 then setting up shop in Pennsylvania, for example, 21 then Delaware law is the prevailing law because it 22 is weaker and that's where the bank is chartered.

23 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: If that 24 bank wanted to come to Pennsylvania to do business 25 as a bank, it would have to be chartered by the

1 state?

2 MS. McCONNELL: Here is the way they 3 avoid that. The payday lenders are actually 4 renting the charters of the out-of-state banks' 5 store fronts, for example, which are not actually 6 banks. You've got somebody who is probably making 7 minimum wage, working a couple hours a day without 8 any sort of financial training, requires you to 9 fill out some form and then plugs it in the 10 computer and processing it because of the rental 11 arrangement. So the official bank may be People's 12 Bank of Texas but the payday lender might be Cash 13 Advance.

14 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: I guess my 15 confusion is that you're suggesting and obviously 16 accurate there is no Pennsylvania law that would 17 prohibit that from happening?

18 MS. McCONNELL: From renting
19 out-of-state charters currently, that is correct.

20 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: That 21 doesn't even sound feasible. Obviously, it's the 22 case. We can, in effect, stop that practice from 23 happening if we were to adopt what you termed 24 anti-brokering laws?

25 MS. McCONNELL: I imagine that payday

1 lenders would still challenge anti-brokering laws 2 in a court of law. But what we tend to see is 3 that the payday lenders are often losing these 4 battles. We do believe that there is some 5 legitimate reason to believe that we could defend 6 those anti-brokering laws.

7 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: One final
8 question. Do you see any way that House Bill 2150 9 can be improved to the extent that -- do you see 10 this, following up on Representative Allen's 11 question, in any way being improved to the extent 12 that it would provide a service without taking 13 advantage of individuals?

14 MS. MCCONNELL: Not in any sort of the 15 way that the payday lenders would probably support 16 the bill in that form. If we were able to reduce 17 the annual percentage rates down to what 18 Pennsylvania already has small loans at, 23.75
19 percent APR -- again, keeping in mind the interest 20 rate and APR are two different numbers -- if we're 21 able to prevent successive loans and also allow 22 consumers who are seeking pre-borrowing to enter 23 into some sort of credit counseling, I think that 24 would be a big improvement over the bill.

25 Again, the problem really that we're

1 trying to stop are the usurious rates and the 2 repeat borrowing. So if we're able to lower those 3 rates down to, again, what other banks are 4 required to meet now, as well as prevent the 5 repeat borrowing, I think it would be worthy of 6 considering. I would doubt very much that the 7 payday lenders would support such a bill.

8 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Thank you
9 very much. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

10 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from 11 York, Mr. Nickol, to my far left has a question.

12 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: Thank you. I
13 gather these exist because there is a consumer 14 demand for payday lending. I would gather that 15 the very people you refer to other alternatives 16 for these consumers to go to get money, I would 17 presume that they are at the payday because they 18 don't have the other alternatives available to 19 them because of bad credit or whatever. It's kind 20 of a catch 22 here where I agree with much of what 21 you're saying but I don't understand your 22 conclusion as to why we should take no action.
23 Maybe you can help me with that. You used the 24 term a couple times that North Carolina eliminated 25 payday lending but then you further testified they

1 didn't.

2 MS. McCONNELL: North Carolina passed
3 a statute a few years ago aimed to regulate payday 4 lenders and what they found is that despite their 5 attempts to regulate it and stop repeat borrowing, 6 consumers were still borrowing time and time
7 again. Lenders were still able to find ways 8 around the law to hook them into the cycle of 9 debt.

10 As a result, after a number of years,
11 North Carolina allowed that law to sunset. Thus, 12 technically now, payday lending is illegal in the 13 state. The only reason why the lender still 14 exists is because of this rent-a-bank arrangement 15 the state has yet to be able to crack down on, 16 although states are moving in that direction.

17 Again, Georgia is an example where 18 litigation has been filed against the lenders for 19 violating their usury laws. There may be some 20 legislation movement pending in North Carolina. I 21 think the Center for Responsible Lending can 22 actually speak in more detail about that as well.

23 In terms of your first question which 24 is, is there a legitimate consumer need for payday
25 lending, I mean, certainly consumers get strapped

1 for cash and certainly there are times they are 2 looking for solutions and don't know where to go.
3 I would argue that payday lending is not a
4 solution, it's only making the situation worse.
5 If we were able to limit the APR, again, down to 6 what Pennsylvania state banks are already required
7 to meet, I think that would be a move in the right 8 direction.

9 But allowing consumers to get mired
10 into a cycle of debt that makes their financial 11 situation a lot worse in the end than they started 12 out -- and sometimes tens of thousands of dollars 13 in debt, filing for bankruptcy, harassed by 14 collection agencies. I don't think that's a way 15 out for consumers or has been any sort of solution 16 and I think by legalizing the industry and 17 allowing them to charge these APRs, we're 18 essentially nodding that that's okay.

19 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: But what I'm 20 trying to get at is you said in North Carolina 21 they eliminated payday lending and they didn't.
22 They just let their law expire. I gather they are 23 in the same situation we are because we don't have 24 a law either and it violates our usury limits. So 25 we have two states here which don't authorize

1 plugs that loophole, why would we not want to 2 consider legislation here to at least have some 3 form of regulation over payday lending until such 4 a point in time that federal authorities allow us
5 to put a total limit?

6 MS. MCCONNELL: Two points to that.
7 One, I think, again, we can pass our own 8 anti-brokering legislation and defend that in 9 court. Again, there is some legitimate legal 10 opinion that that legislation would survive a 11 court case based on federal law. And that 12 essentially would be our own way to stop the 13 payday lenders and rent-a-bank arrangements here.

14 Second, I think regulating the 15 industry and allowing for rates that are usurious
16 now to continue, I think it sends a very different 17 message to federal regulators, as well to other 18 states, about our view of payday lending and its 19 place and its role in our state. I think the 20 message it sends is that we will allow it versus 21 we want to crack down on it which I think is the 22 solution with the anti-brokering legislation.

23 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: I realize
24 you're looking for the perfect but I don't 25 understand why we shouldn't give some modicum of 1 protection in the interim by enacting at least 2 some reasonable requirements. I guess we can 3 differ on that. But I don't know that our 4 ultimate aim might not be the same. I don't 5 understand your absoluteness of the position that 6 nothing, no protection is better than a little bit 7 in the interim until there is some change in the 8 federal regulation.

9 MS. MCCONNELL: I hear what you're 10 saying. I guess the perspective that PennPIRG has 11 is no payday lending industry is better than some 12 payday lending industry. We would rather put an 13 end to payday lenders, again, as long as they are 14 violating usury laws we have here in Pennsylvania 15 rather than find some way to make their brand of 16 loan sharking somewhat less bad than it already is 17 or somewhat less of a rip off than it already is.

18 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: Thank you, Mr.
19 Chairman.

20 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from 21 Westmoreland, Mr. Casorio.

22 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
23 Mr. Chairman. Thank you for holding this hearing.
24 Ms. McConnell, thank you for being with us today.
25 I have just a couple of brief points and I'm

1 looking forward to hearing from our friends from 2 the State AFL. The ten state-chartered supervised
3 banks that you spoke of a bit with Representative 4 Tangretti, those are ,again, banks out of the 5 borders of Pennsylvania?

6 MS. McCONNELL: Those are primarily 7 banks out of -- yes, I believe they are all out of 8 Pennsylvania and they are FDIC supervised banks.

9 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Again, this 10 was a very extensive report. Thank you. I guess 11 we can surmise that ten of the state-chartered 12 banks seem to be the culprit for most of the 13 problem here?

14 MS. McCONNELL: Exactly. As far as we 15 can tell, there are ten of these banks that are 16 partnering, again, or renting their charters with 17 most of the payday lenders and pawnshops. I can 18 actually get you a list of those ten banks.

19 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you.
20 You said the nationwide annual percentage rate was 21 about 390 percent on a whole. House Bill 2150 22 that we are considering here would allow for as 23 much as a 420 percent rate per year; is that 24 correct?

25 MS. McCONNELL: The industry standard

1 right now nationwide is about 408 percent APR. A 2 two-week loan for $100 under this legislation, the 3 APR would top 400 percent. But you can slice it a 4 few different ways and get some higher APRs. If 5 it's a one-week loan, the APR can be as high as 6 900 percent under this legislation. It really 7 depends on how you look at it and how much is 8 borrowed, certainly. But generally, the APRs are 9 significantly higher than the state law allows.

10 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: I think that 11 900 number -- and again, that may be extreme. But 12 if we take it to the 400 percent number, it really 13 exemplifies the problem here. We can never force 14 people to change any kind of behavior. But 15 hopefully, we can try to educate them. I'm afraid 16 what these kinds of loans do -- we have a letter 17 that, I think, we all received the other day from 18 someone saying that these are aimed at mostly 19 middle America, if you will. I tend to disagree 20 with that.

21 I think they are aimed mostly at 22 poorer Americans, if you will, folks on low 23 incomes, seniors, if you will, that don't have 24 family to live in that three or four room house
25 from 1950 that they built and they don't get out

1 that often and doesn't have the economics or the 2 tools or the ability to differentiate between 3 various financial concerns. I think that's who 4 they are targeting here, quite frankly. It's all 5 about education.

6 The Florida report that you talked
7 about, which was very extensive as well, was it
8 based anywhere geographically in the state, I'm 9 just wondering, or was it the state on a whole or 10 did there seem to be pockets of geography?

11 MS. McCONNELL: The report actually 12 does look at where the customers are and I can 13 refer to that. I can't profess to know an awful 14 lot about Florida demographics or geography to 15 tell you whether or not these are lower-income 16 areas or higher-income areas. I think primarily 17 this is metropolitan area. It may not necessarily 18 tell you within that metropolitan area. But most 19 of the consumers, about 27 and a half percent, 20 were in the Tampa region, about 17 and a half 21 percent in the Orlando region, 13 percent in the 22 area around Jacksonville, 10 percent in Fort 23 Lauderdale and so on and so forth.

24 I think you're right. Payday lenders
25 do particularly target consumers who are strapped

1 for cash but consumers who are working or have a 2 regular paycheck. Some of the data on 3 demographics has shown that they are predominantly 4 woman, often in single parent households, again, 5 with a regular job and regular paycheck supporting 6 families in many cases. That's exactly what the 7 lenders go after.

8 Again, members of the military are 9 other prime targets for lenders. If you drive 10 actually near or around military bases, often as 11 you head into the base you will see a large number 12 of payday lenders with names like Military Cash 13 Advance or Patriot Lenders or some other sort of 14 name that elicits some sort of government 15 involvement in some way because it's called 16 military something. So they are clustered often 17 around there.

18 One of the concerns certainly also,
19 since we just passed legislation to allow for some 20 extended gambling in Pennsylvania, is whether or 21 not some of the payday lenders will set up shop 22 around those locations and particularly target 23 gamblers. I think that's a real concern.

24 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: The 25 successive loans that you spoke of I think is

1 truly the telling point here. Chairman Hasay gave 2 the example of a refrigerator. I think those of 3 us that have that type of problem would certainly 4 be able to at least handle the majority of that 5 loan in a successive week or two or three and have 6 that loan paid off. But I think where folks 7 borrowing $300, $400, $500, not meeting that, not 8 meeting the APR and then coming back and borrowing 9 another $300, $400, $500 to cover that three or 10 four times over, as you said, that's probably the 11 core problem, I think, that rubs us wrong.

12 I appreciate your testimony here
13 today. Again, my concern is the lack of 14 education. We may have to couple with the banking 15 department -- hopefully, the Secretary will make 16 his way here from State College -- and see if we 17 can't at least collectively through our 18 legislative districts -- most of my constituents 19 probably don't even know these places exist, if 20 you will. So I think it's an educational process 21 and I'm glad that you were here today to tell us.
22 Thank you. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

23 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Mr. Gillespie from 24 Lancaster has a question.

25 REPRESENTATIVE GILLESPIE: Thank you,

1 Mr. Chairman: Once again, thank you for your 2 testimony. Continuing on with Chairman Hasay's 3 refrigerator example, you mentioned the first 4 round of 17.50 per hundred for the $500. In my 5 quick calculation, that's somewhere close to $600, 6 a little bit less. You said when they default on 7 that or fail, then a whole new set of charges will 8 come in for round two. I'm just curious. Could 9 you give us a quick example of what that may be 10 and what the time line would be that that would 11 kick in?

12 MS. MCCONNELL: For example, just to 13 use round numbers, your loan is $500 and your fees 14 are $100, making the total loan $600 that you owe 15 at the end of the term of the loan, which, again, 16 is usually about 14 days. If you are unable to 17 pay that full $600, normally a consumer will pay 18 the fees, the finance charges, the $100, roll the 19 loan over again for another two weeks and incur 20 another set of finance charges, another $100 in 21 fees. So they have paid $100. They still owe 22 $600. Two weeks later, again, they need to either 23 pay that full $600 or they pay the fees, the $100, 24 roll it over again so they have paid $200 and 25 still owe $600. So week after week after week

1 they are making no progress on the principal of 2 the loan, of course, because the finance charges
3 are so unmanageable and they just pay the fees.

4 Now, the payday lenders may argue that 5 they have an enormous number of consumers that 6 default so they need to charge those high fees in 7 order to make up for the defaulted loans.

8 Actually, there is some research out there that 9 shows that, well, lenders -- I believe it was in 10 one state and I believe it was in North Carolina
11 again -- claimed about 12 and a half million 12 dollars in write-offs in bad loans. They earned 13 over $100 million in fees that same year. So they 14 are making the money back on the fees even when 15 the loan is in default itself. That, again, is 16 key to the business model, key to making the 17 industry profitable.

18 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you.
19 Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

20 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The Chairman
21 recognizes the gentleman from Lackawanna, Mr.
22 Wansacz, for the final question.

23 REPRESENTATIVE WANSACZ: Thank you,
24 Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Beth, for testifying.
25 My question is following up on Representative

1 Casorio's questions. How do people find out about 2 the payday lending institutions? I know you
3 mentioned around military, billboards. What 4 happens for those of us who don't have a military 5 base in the area? How are they targeting people?
6 How are they finding people to give them loans?

7 MS. MCCONNELL: Certainly, I know when 8 I walk down -- I live in Center City Philadelphia.
9 When I walk down Market Street in Center City, I 10 see huge signs, quick cash until payday, it's 11 simple, come on in, you won't believe how easy it 12 is to get $500. They place ads certainly in 13 newspapers and the advertising market just like 14 most businesses do.

15 I don't want to get too much into 16 internet, payday lending and the difference
17 between the two, but certainly there is an influx 18 of this stuff on the web as well. I get e-mail 19 messages to my e-mail account all the time to 20 apply for a payday loan, which I think is ironic.
21 They market just like any other business does.
22 They are particularly clustered in areas where 23 their consumers and where their market is, lower 24 income but working consumers.

25 One of the things -- I didn't cover

1 this a bit in my testimony. But not long ago I
2 called a couple of payday lenders just to find out 3 what can I learn, if I'm somebody who is 4 interested in actually taking out one of these 5 loans. And I called and I asked them how much it 6 would cost. Can I get an answer? And I couldn't.

7 I called three or four different 8 lenders and they would not actually tell me what 9 the arrangement was like and what I was doing and 10 how much it would cost. They want to get you in 11 the store. Come on down. We'll show you the 12 contract. We'll explain it there. I can't tell 13 you because I'm not a loan officer. They can't 14 give you any information over the phone or they 15 claim not to be able to give you any information 16 over the phone. So they get you in the store and, 17 obviously, it's easier for them to make that loan.

18 I think that's unfair to the consumer 19 who is trying to do a good job and shop around and 20 be a smart consumer and find out how much 21 something costs. We actually, in meetings with 22 the industry a few months ago at a summit in 23 Chicago, urged them to do a better job in training 24 their customer service representatives who answer
25 the phones to be honest. They refused to do so

1 because they were concerned, this particular
2 representative, concerned about the liability 3 issues of a telephone representative actually 4 giving information to a consumer.

5 REPRESENTATIVE WANSACZ: I'm trying to 6 go back and understand this issue completely.
7 When people come in, for example, and take out a
8 payday loan, the chances of them, as Chairman
9 Hasay mentioned -- if they don't show up to pay 10 their bills and they get a bounced check fee or 11 something, what happens? Do they just worry about 12 going to the bank and never pay the payday loans?
13 Somebody having a small business and a background 14 where people have bounced checks before, it's very 15 difficult for a business to go after somebody for 16 not paying. Do you know the percentage of cases 17 like this?

18 MS. MCCONNELL: I don't know the 19 percentage. I do know that in some cases, it 20 depends certainly on the bank and the type of 21 account you have. In some cases, if you bounce a 22 check, the bank will pay the check and you owe the 23 bank the fees and you work it out with them. Not 24 all consumers have that kind of arrangement. If 25 the check bounces, it bounces and you still owe

1 the person that you originally wrote the check to,
2 plus you owe them the bounced check fees, plus you 3 also owe your bank bounced check fees. You still 4 in most cases will need to deal with the payday 5 lender.

6 And another lawsuit was actually filed
7 in another state -- forgive me for not knowing 8 where -- recently for payday lenders that actually 9 engaged in some pretty aggressive collections
10 tactics with those consumers, threatening criminal 11 prosecution, harassing telephone calls and some 12 real over-the-top behavior according to this 13 particular lawsuit. I can actually, again, 14 forward you exactly what that state was and what 15 the lawsuit was. I can't recall exactly where but 16 it was recent.

17 CHAIRMAN HASAY: We still have a 18 couple more questions. The gentleman from 19 Philadelphia, Mr. Thomas.

20 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Thank you, Mr.
21 Chairman. Thank you, Ms. McConnell, for your 22 testimony. It is my understanding from a lot of 23 check cashers, at least in Philadelphia County, 24 that they do not support payday lending. Has that 25 come up in your research?

1 MS. McCONNELL: I can't actually
2 comment on that, particularly the difference
3 between check cashers and payday lenders. I think 4 Mr. Ackelsberg from Community Legal Services has 5 some particular background in the difference
6 between the check cashers and store front payday
7 lenders. He can probably comment on that better 8 than I can.

9 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: I know at 10 least two or three check cashers in the general 11 area of my district office. They do not engage in 12 payday lending and they are strongly opposed to 13 payday lending practices. I was wondering if it 14 has come up in your research.

15 Going back to comment that a colleague 16 made earlier as I was coming in on this issue of 17 whether some protection is better than no
18 protection, my question to you is whether or not 19 we are viewing the issue of protection in the 20 right context because it seems to me payday 21 lending is a bad practice and the protection we 22 will be giving actually will act as a cover for 23 what has been deemed illegal practices; is that a 24 correct?

25 MS. McCONNELL: Thank you,

1 Representative Thomas. I think you articulated
2 much better than I did. I think that's exactly 3 right. The protection that this bill gives is 4 more protection to the industry than it is to the 5 consumer and that's why PennPIRG opposes it. I
6 also want to close with my remark and comment 7 there and to also thank you, Representative, for 8 your leadership. I know that you have been 9 working very hard as a champion of consumers on 10 this particular issue for some time now. I 11 appreciate that.

12 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Thank you, Mr.
13 Chairman.

14 CHAIRMAN HASAY: For the information
15 of the public, this Committee addressed check 16 cashers a number of years ago when we made them
17 register and be licensed. What check cashers do 18 is just cash your check for a fee. Payday lenders
19 are different. You get a loan and you pay 20 interest and fees. So check cashers are separate 21 in that respect.

22 Beth, you have always been very 23 informative. We really appreciate you coming in 24 and keeping an eye on the consumer. The members 25 have had a lot of questions. Again, thank you for

1 your time and your testimony and for coming here 2 today.

3 MS. MCCONNELL: Thank you for having 4 me.

5 CHAIRMAN HASAY: We are going to try
6 to keep on schedule. We are a little bit behind.
7 Next we have Pearre Dean, Regional COPE Director
8 with the American Federation of Labor. Director
9 Dean, thank you for coming today and we appreciate 10 what you have to say about payday lending.

11 MR. DEAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
12 Thanks for having me here. My name is Pearre 13 Dean. I am the Regional COPE Director for the 14 Pennsylvania AFL-CIO. I'm here to testify on 15 behalf of the 900,000-plus members of our 16 organization. I'm here to testify on House Bill 17 2150.

18 We believe this legislation will have 19 a strong negative impact on Pennsylvania's workers
20 and their families. Payday lending is directly 21 and specifically aimed at our members who have 22 paydays. It is our responsibility to protect our 23 members' paychecks while they are hard at work in 24 these trying economic times. Obviously, we 25 believe that this is the responsible position for

1 members of the General Assembly as well.

2 These are harsh days for Pennsylvania
3 workers. Wages and real dollars are below what 4 the average pay was in 1979. Pay increases have 5 been more than offset, in recent years, by health
6 care cost shifting. Workers in the Commonwealth
7 are working harder, being more productive and yet
8 in real dollars are earning less. This is a 9 continuing trend with slight upticks for the past 10 25 years.

11 The unemployed worker rate has been 12 consistently high in the state with over 350,000 13 workers on average without jobs, but looking for 14 work each month. As the Chairman knows, the 15 statewide unemployment figures are much higher in 16 the Northeast and almost all rural Pennsylvania 17 and Southwest Pennsylvania.

18 Dislocated workers, those who have 19 good family-sustaining jobs, are now finding new 20 careers in low-wage service jobs. This group of 21 workers have downsized their living standards, 22 lost health care protection and are particularly 23 vulnerable to these predatory lenders, such as 24 payday lenders, to maintain obligations undertaken 25 when they had good paying jobs.

1 In sum, these are hard economic times
2 for the average workers in Pennsylvania, those 3 employed and those unemployed. It should be noted
4 that one in eight, and I repeat, one in eight
5 Pennsylvania workers received unemployment 6 compensation last year.

7 Other measures of the economic health
8 of the Commonwealth citizens all tell the same 9 story. Bankruptcies are at an all time high.
10 Mortgage foreclosures across the state are at a 11 all time high. The Pennsylvania minimum wage 12 remains frozen since 1997 at $5.15 an hour.

13 In this atmosphere, we are here to 14 talk about House Bill 2150, Printer's No. 2897,
15 which would create enabling legislation for payday 16 lenders. For workers, the heart of the money is 17 in the interest rate. Call it a fee, brokerage 18 rate, whatever legal mumbo jumbo lingo, whatever 19 you want to dream up. It's the interest rate.

20 In this case, the bill talks about a 21 17.5 percent maximum interest rate. Is that per 22 day, per month, per year, what have you? It
23 doesn't state that in the legislation at all. I 24 don't believe that it is a mistake that it was 25 drafted that way.

1 In real terms, the 17.5 percent
2 amounts to 450 percent interest on the money 3 that's borrowed for two weeks from payday to 4 payday. Many are paid weekly, in which case, the 5 loan rate is 910 percent if borrowed for the full 6 week. The rate charge will be $17.50 per $100
7 borrowed. If the allowable $500 is borrowed, the 8 cost to the worker would be $87.50 for $500. If 9 the bill's ceiling is increased to $1,000
10 borrowed, the cost to the worker is $175.

11 If you think that payday lending 12 institutions operate anywhere at the rates near 13 17.5 percent annual interest rate, please look at 14 the attachments that I have included with my 15 testimony, which are some web ads and some things 16 I have picked up along the way.

17 In hard economic times, it is simply 18 beyond reasonable justification to charge
19 borrowers, often desperate, triple-digit interest.
20 In effect, this would be legalized loan sharking.
21 Until the proponents of the legislation are 22 willing to talk about double-digit annual interest 23 rates -- and I want to clarify what I mean by 24 double digit. I'm talking about the 23.5 percent 25 that was talked about in the earlier testimony.

1 There is no reason for representatives
2 of working men and women to talk about the bells 3 and whistles of consumer protection. We would 4 like to point out, however, the strikingly unique 5 nature of payday lending.

6 Payday lenders would have the tools to 7 assure repayment virtually as strong as 8 garnishment. Payday lenders operate either with a 9 post-dated check or an electronic transfer
10 authorization. Payday lenders get their money
11 first. They get all of the loan repaid.

12 This characteristic of the scheme is 13 particularly poisonous. Few workers can withstand 14 to have $500 or $1,000 taken out of their paycheck
15 in one lump sum. The only solution is to go back 16 and borrow again, paying another $17.50 per 100
17 owed. Although rollovers would be limited in this 18 legislation, they are ways around the limitation, 19 waiting one day, having a working spouse or 20 someone else in the home to take out the loan, 21 plus others that the creative financially
22 desperate minds will invent.

23 What we are saying here is not only
24 are the rates outrageous, but they also drag 25 working families into perpetual debt. This is not

1 good public policy. Regarding existing payday
2 lenders, there seems to be some confusion
3 regarding their status.

4 Some are renting federal bank charters
5 and using the bank charter as legal authority to 6 conduct payday lending. I have attached a letter
7 from the Comptroller of the Currency/Administrator
8 of National Banks, which strongly discourages 9 banks from engaging in this practice and indicates 10 strongly that any federal bank that engages in 11 this activity will be closely monitored with their 12 license on the line. The compliance requirements 13 are so stringent that few federally chartered 14 banks will engage in this activity or be able to 15 meet the requirements since the OCC letter.

16 Also attached is the consent order in 17 the case of Advance American; Cash Advance
18 Centers, Incorporated; Agent and Bank Service
19 Provider for Peoples Bank of Paris, Texas dated 20 2003. Among the many aspects of this consent 21 order is the commitment that Advance America will 22 no longer provide services related to the 23 organization's renewal and rollover of bank payday
24 loans in or after February 28, 2003 in North 25 Carolina.

1 So be clear, the consent order does 2 not preclude future payday lending arrangements in 3 the Commonwealth or anywhere else. Approval by 4 the Comptroller of the Currency is provided for in 5 the consent order. We do not know, and it well
6 may be true, that the facts for Advance America 7 have changed and have been approved by the 8 Comptroller. The point here is that federal bank 9 oversight has intensified and with that intensity 10 has come a push for state-enabling legislation 11 like House Bill 2150.

12 Additionally, the FDIC, on July 2nd, 13 2003, issued guidelines on payday lenders that 14 rent bank charters of FDIC-insured banks,
15 according to the Consumer Federation of America.
16 I quote, while the FDIC does not categorically
17 prohibit banks from partnering with payday 18 lenders, the guidelines require up to dollar for 19 dollar capitalization of loans, call any loan 60 20 days in default and brand serial loans as an 21 unsafe banking.

22 Small loans, where there is no federal 23 bank or state charter rented, are governed by the 24 Consumer Discount Company Act, formerly known as 25 the Small Loan Act, adopted by the Pennsylvania

1 General Assembly and is the law in our great
2 state.

3 The Consumer Discount Company Act
4 covers loans from $25 to $25,000 and has an 5 allowable annual interest rate of 23.5 percent.
6 The enforcement of this law lies with the 7 Secretary of Banking and includes civil and 8 criminal penalties.

9 We suppose by using some legal lingo,
10 payday lenders can argue that they are not 11 lenders, but brokers. Payday lenders handle every 12 aspect of the loan including the financing and,
13 therefore, should be fully regulated as provided 14 by law.

15 The last door open to payday lenders
16 is to rent state bank charters and this is a 17 prevalent activity. In order to stop this 18 usurious lending by store fronts that register as 19 loan brokers and partner with banks in South 20 Dakota and Delaware to charge unlimited rates, the 21 Pennsylvania General Assembly can do what other 22 states have done: prohibit store fronts from 23 brokering or arranging loans that they can't 24 legally make themselves.

25 Our sister state of Maryland did just

1 that and is free from stores that make loans at 2 triple-digit interest rates. Georgia just 3 outlawed rent-a-bank payday lending with a law 4 that has withstood legal challenge. I am open for 5 any questions that you may have.

6 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you, Mr. Dean,
7 very much for your information. I know you know
8 your members very well. We have worked together
9 in the past with the Committee. There is a 10 question that strikes my mind as well. The guy 11 that's going in for the refrigerator that has to 12 borrow $500 and he needs it today and the payday
13 lenders or cash advance give him the loan, why 14 wouldn't he just use his credit card to do that?
15 His percent would be 23 percent. Or some of these 16 folks, they don't have credit cards?

17 MR. DEAN: That may be the general
18 consensus, that these folks don't have credit or 19 can't get enough credit to sustain a loan of $500.

20 CHAIRMAN HASAY: I mean, these places
21 are busy and they have clients. I know some of 22 the members have some questions. I know the 23 gentleman from Monroe, Mr. Scavello, has a 24 question or two. Thank you, Mr. Dean.

25 MR. DEAN: Thank you.

1 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: Thank you,
2 Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Mr. Dean, for your 3 testimony. I heard earlier about loan sharking.
4 It wasn't in your testimony. I just felt that 5 whenever someone went to a loan shark, they were 6 doing something illegal, either gambling or maybe 7 buying drugs or whatever else, to borrow money. I
8 always thought that. With payday lending, is it 9 possible that that might also be the case, where 10 somebody is looking not to fix their refrigerator, 11 but maybe to gamble or buy illegal drugs or 12 something like? Is that a possibility?

13 MR. DEAN: That's a possibility. The 14 consumer makes the choice of what they are going 15 to use the money for.

16 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: I tend to 17 agree with you that if someone can't afford to get 18 a loan properly, once they put themselves in a 19 position like this, they will never get out. They 20 will be paying $30 or whatever it is a week for 21 the next hundred years.

22 MR. DEAN: Just like credit cards, if 23 you pay the minimum.

24 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: And it preys
25 on the people that have it the least. If they

1 have families -- like I heard earlier, it's 2 predominantly women with families. That comes out
3 to food off their table.

4 MR. DEAN: Exactly.

5 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: It's taking 6 money out of their pocket to do just that. Thank 7 you for your testimony.

8 MR. DEAN: Thank you.

9 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The Chair recognizes
10 the gentleman from Schuylkill, Mr. Allen, to my 11 far left.

12 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: Thank you,
13 Director Dean, for being here today. I have a 14 very strident question for you. Are you 15 suggesting that the Secretary of Banking in 16 Pennsylvania ban payday lenders?

17 MR. DEAN: That's what I'm suggesting.

18 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: From reading
19 your testimony, if the Secretary of Banking does 20 that -- I talked earlier about the loan sharking
21 situation -- are you concerned about that? Do you 22 think that's a viable thing or not or do you just 23 think the people will try to get some kind of 24 conventional loan in some other way? That's my 25 greatest concern in this issue. I'm not disputing

1 that you may be right. Maybe the thing would be 2 to ban payday lenders. But then the question
3 comes to be, where do we go from there? And that 4 could be a major problem that I see. I would like 5 your comments on that.

6 MR. DEAN: As far as the actual loan
7 sharking issue, I'm unaware of it. And in my 8 travels, I have never come across anyone I have 9 ever known to ever go to a loan shark or what have 10 you and get one of these loans and be in perpetual 11 debt with these guys and get your legs broken by 12 some unscrupulous character in an alley somewhere.
13 I'm unaware of that.

14 The whole thing with the payday
15 lending for us is the interest rate, period, the 16 400 and some percent. I have some examples in the 17 bank of my testimony which are some outrageous 18 rates. I think the fifth page from the back of 19 the testimony talks about dealing with a bank from 20 Grenada. We don't know what their lending 21 practices are.

22 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: I have one more
23 question, Mr. Chairman, if I'm allowed. If the 24 interest rates were dropped to a certain degree -- 25 now, the payday lending industry says that if the

1 interest rates are dropped, because of the number 2 of people who default on these loans, that they 3 would not be able to operate. I'm asking if the 4 payday lenders would drop their interest rates or 5 they were capped at a certain level that maybe you
6 would deem fair, are you willing to accept payday
7 lenders or do you want them just eliminated, 8 period?

9 MR. DEAN: If they are going to exist,
10 I would like to see the interest rate dropped to 11 whatever the 23.5 percent is. Being a former 12 mortgage originator, we have a debt-to-loan ratio.
13 If they follow these guidelines the same way banks 14 do and operate like banks and follow the same 15 guidelines and they do the 23.5 percent instead of 16 this ridiculous 400, we can sit down and talk 17 about that.

18 REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN: Thank you.
19 That's the direction I was going in. I thank you 20 for your honest answer. Thank you.

21 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Since we are over in 22 the far left, the Chair recognizes the gentleman 23 from York, Mr. Nickol.

24 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: Thank you.
25 I'm curious. In reading your testimony, you

1 talked about our sister state of Maryland and you 2 say they are free from stores that make loans at 3 triple-digit rates. Are you saying that Maryland 4 is free of payday lenders or that Maryland -- they 5 have payday lenders but they are at a lower rate?
6 What exactly are you saying about Maryland? Do 7 they have payday lenders?

8 MR. DEAN: From what I understand, 9 they have been able to drop their interest rate to 10 a double-digit interest rate of 99 percent.

11 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: Isn't that 12 through state regulation that they were able to do 13 that?

14 MR. DEAN: Through state regulation,
15 yes.

16 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: So we do have 17 the prospect that Pennsylvania could enact some 18 regulation or some law that would give a modicum 19 of protection to people who are using payday 20 lenders today?

21 MR. DEAN: It could be done.

22 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: I'm curious on 23 another point and I don't know if you have an 24 answer on this or not. I've been told that there 25 is no barrier to payday lenders -- we could ban

1 store fronts but there is no barrier to us banning 2 payday lending over the internet?

3 MR. DEAN: That's correct. I have 4 actually done a lot of research on the payday
5 lending aspect over the internet and I have come 6 across 73 web sites that do this. In the 7 testimony that I have submitted, there are some 8 examples in the back. There is also my cash now
9 dot com which is one bank of Grenada, one bank 10 from Rehoboth Beach of Delaware in which you have 11 to fax your banking information, your statements, 12 your pay stubs and the fax number is a fax number 13 in Delaware County.

14 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: I really have 15 somewhat of a fear, as articulated by 16 Representative Allen in questioning with the 17 previous witness, of what may be the result of 18 just saying, okay, we're just not going to pass 19 anything or just totally eliminating payday
20 lending.

21 I mean, I have six children. So I 22 become a payday lender myself and my interest is 23 much lower than what these are charging, if I'm 24 repaid at all. Most recently I got a call from 25 one of my children who forgot and who didn't

1 escrow for the real estate taxes, just totally 2 forgot about it and all of a sudden the real 3 estate taxes become due and dad gets a phone call.
4 So I realize some of the situations people are up
5 against that may go and use a payday lender.

6 Do you have a fear if we don't do
7 something to in some way clean up and legitimize 8 them with proper regulation, as maybe the State of 9 Maryland has done as you're suggesting, we're 10 going to have the same people using the internet 11 or going to a loan shark? I mean, are we throwing 12 out a modicum of protection that we can offer 13 through legislation instead of really throwing 14 these people to the dogs.

15 MR. DEAN: The consumer protections
16 that are in the current legislation are industry 17 based. They are not coming from us. They are not 18 coming from any consumer entity. These are 19 protections that they submitted themselves, wrote
20 into the legislation and is basically the fox 21 watching the hen house.

22 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: But it might 23 be possible in your estimation to make changes to 24 that so that -- I mean, what I gather from the 25 previous testifier is they want us to do nothing.

1 They prefer that we don't give any legitimacy at 2 all or even give some modicum of protection to the 3 consumer. I take it your position may be somewhat 4 different than theirs in that you could see the 5 prospect, maybe not this bill, but a bill, that 6 would offer some legitimacy, say, to payday 7 lenders but with a lot of added protections to the 8 consumer?

9 MR. DEAN: I will say it this way. If 10 it's going to exist, we would like to see as many 11 consumer protections as possible. As far as 12 seeing it legitimized, like I said, if it's going 13 to happen, let's put as many consumer protections 14 in there as we can.

15 REPRESENTATIVE NICKOL: Thank you.

16 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The Chair recognizes
17 the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Thomas.

18 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Thank you.
19 Thank you, Mr. Dean. I was just curious as to 20 whether or not all of labor is on board with 21 opposing this bill?

22 MR. DEAN: The 900,000 members or the 23 62 or 63 organizations that belong to the 24 Pennsylvania AFL-CIO are against payday lending.
25 If you're talking about all of labor, all of labor

1 is not on board with this legislation. We had the 2 Teamsters that are for this.

3 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: The Teamsters
4 are supporting this?

5 MR. DEAN: They are supporting this.

6 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Do you know
7 why they are supporting this?

8 MR. DEAN: They have a few members of 9 theirs in the western part of the state and also 10 in Ohio that run these payday organizations.

11 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Thank you, Mr.
12 Dean. My last question would be, if I understand 13 you correctly, you can accept a legislative 14 prescription for payday lending if it's truly 15 consumer driven and not industry driven? I notice 16 in your testimony you indicate that double-digit 17 interest rates are unacceptable. would 18 single-digit interest rates be acceptable?

19 MR. DEAN: They would be acceptable.
20 Our whole push against this is the interest rate.
21 Plain and simple, it's the outrageous interest
22 rate. If that can be brought down to the 23.5
23 percent as the Small Loan Act indicates, we may be 24 able to sit down and talk about something with 25 consumer protections.

1 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: The 2 legislative prescription that's before us, in your 3 opinion, is industry driven and if we're going to 4 go down this path, it should be consumer driven?

5 MR. DEAN: Correct.

6 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Thank you.

7 CHAIRMAN HASAY: We still have another
8 question from the gentleman from Westmoreland, Mr.
9 Casorio.

10 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
11 Chairman Hasay. Director Dean, thank you for 12 coming here today and thank you for your work and 13 President George's work on behalf of the working 14 people of Pennsylvania.

15 Two points. One, I talked earlier
16 when we discussed Ms. McConnell's testimony about 17 education. And I think we, at the state, have 18 been loath to rally behind this education as 19 quickly as we should and I think we need to pick 20 up the slack.

21 With that said, let me ask you, I know
22 that you try to educate your members on a wide 23 variety of things from health care to family 24 interests and working concerns and conditions. Is 25 there any -- and if there is, please tell me what

1 and, if not, maybe we can start something. Is 2 there any kind of educational program that the AFL 3 sets up to at least help its members with banking 4 or financial concerns, even basic 101 differences 5 between certain lending tools or instruments?

6 MR. DEAN: We have our credit unions
7 in which they can borrow money from or get 8 low-interest rate loans from. They offer consumer 9 education on how to save your money, how to spend 10 your money, what traps to look out for and so on.
11 We have a number of national organizations through 12 our national AFL-CIO which is called Union Plus 13 and they deal with either secured or unsecured
14 credit cards if our members should deem it 15 necessary to go that route.

16 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Members of 17 the AFL in the state, can you give me the number 18 of membership total?

19 MR. DEAN: In the state?

20 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Yes.

21 MR. DEAN: 900,000.

22 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: So those 23 900,000 folks and their families, 3 or 4 members 24 of the family, that's 3 to 4 million people, 25 roughly, we're talking about that may have some

1 interaction with banking or financial interests.
2 Are they, again, alerted or are they given 3 something that's mailed from the AFL or are they 4 informed other than just that there is a credit
5 union? Is there an outreach program?

6 MR. DEAN: We have a director of 7 community services who handles that aspect of 8 reaching out to the members as far as that sort of 9 education, also community-driven organizations, 10 credit counseling and so on. But, again, that 11 kind of information is available and we do 12 distribute that.

13 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Credit unions
14 are a good reference point for a lot of folks.
15 One other point quickly. You mentioned about 16 Grenada, a bank in Grenada. Lord knows it could 17 be anywhere else. We have seen the state siphon 18 jobs into India and other places offshore. Not 19 only is this something that's, if not criminal, 20 certainly predatory, certainly predatory.

21 The number of banking numbers, the 22 number of social security numbers, check numbers, 23 credit card numbers, those types of things that 24 are going into the hands of these payday folks and 25 banks that are being siphoned to Grenada and India

1 who are countries that don't do banking, if you
2 will, that is an offshore third party, that raises
3 a concern for me and another day for a hearing
4 probably for security interests, ID theft, not 5 only personal ID theft.

6 And these folks are vulnerable. They 7 probably don't even have the ability to interact.
8 If they are using payday on a successive basis, 9 three or four loans, they are going to be far 10 behind catching up on identity theft when someone 11 goes out and charges a $600 stereo or fitness 12 equipment or what have you.

13 Again, those folks are vulnerable and 14 not only in an individual sense, but as a national 15 security threat, those kinds of IDs and numbers 16 going offshore and Lord knows who's coming back in 17 under the guise of being Pearre Dean or Jim 18 Casorio. So I think not only does it raise a 19 concern of being predatory, but certainly an 20 individual security threat and potentially a 21 national security threat.

22 I wanted to thank you for bringing 23 that up and I appreciate you being here today.
24 Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

25 MR. DEAN: Thank you.

1 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Mr. Dean, thank you
2 very much for your information. You have been 3 very informative to the members of the Committee
4 and the public on your information you provided 5 testimony for today. Thank you very much.

6 MR. DEAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

7 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Next we have Mr. Irv
8 Ackelsberg who is the managing attorney for 9 Community Legal Services. Mr. Ackelsberg, thank 10 you for coming here today and we appreciate your 11 testimony.

12 MR. ACKELSBURG: Thank you, Mr.
13 Chairman and members of the Committee. My name is 14 Irv Ackelsberg and I am with Community Legal 15 Services, a state-funded legal services
16 organization in Philadelphia where I have 17 practiced mostly consumer law for the last 27 18 years. My expertise is primarily in the area of 19 consumer credit. I'm a contributing author of the 20 legal treatise Pennsylvania Consumer Law and I am 21 a member of the Financial Abuse Subcommittee of 22 the recently appointed Governor's Task Force on 23 Working Families.

24 What I would like to do is to step 25 outside for a minute my prepared remarks that are

1 in writing that you all have and answer some of 2 the questions that have emerged here with prior 3 witnesses. What I would like to do, if you will 4 indulge me on that, is talk a little bit -- I
5 believe it was Representative Tangretti that asked 6 for some history about loan sharking and state 7 law. I would like to do that.

8 I would also like to explain a term
9 that's been used and I think it requires a little 10 bit of explanation, this idea of renting of bank 11 charters, since you can't actually rent a bank 12 charter. It's a figure of speech and I want to 13 explain a little bit how that actually works.

14 I also want to give you some examples
15 of what these loans look like in flesh and blood
16 and I have attached some examples to my testimony.
17 I want to actually run through an example of how 18 that refrigerator purchase then becomes a series 19 of loans and to actually put a dollar figure on,
20 not in the abstract, but what this bill, House 21 Bill 2150, would allow. I also want to attempt to 22 answer the question raised by Representatives
23 Allen and Tangretti about, don't we need something 24 or else we'll just have loan sharking.

25 In terms of the history, I would ask

1 you to turn the clock back to the 1930s. There 2 was loan sharking rampant all over the country.
3 The Russell Sage Foundation began a national 4 movement to try to do something about this 5 problem.

6 Usually, the way it's described in the 7 history books is that workers on a Monday would 8 get $5 and then on Friday, the so-called salary 9 lenders -- those were the names of these 10 characters -- they would then actually be there at 11 the gates of the factory requiring payment of $6
12 for the $5 that was received. So for that 5 days, 13 you were paying 20 percent. Again, we're not 14 talking APRs when we say that. You would have to 15 annualize that or what that means. But this was 16 the practice that was going on all over this 17 country.

18 And what happened was there was this 19 movement to try to protect the citizens of the 20 country from this kind of predatory practice. The 21 way the movement framed the request for legal 22 action was they asked for the passage of what's 23 called small loan laws, laws that would license 24 and regulate the making of small loans. And we 25 have one of those. The Consumer Discount Company

1 Act is Pennsylvania's small loan law, the original
2 version of which was passed, I believe, in 1937
3 and has been updated over time.

4 These loans, if regulated by the 5 Consumer Discount Company Act, would be illegal.
6 They are illegal. But there is a loophole and 7 that's the loophole that creates this so-called 8 rent-a-bank arrangement. What the law says is 9 that it's illegal not only to make, but to arrange
10 small loans that violate the Consumer Discount
11 Company Act; except that early on in the statute 12 it states, however, a business that arranges a 13 consumer discount company loan or arranges a loan 14 that would otherwise be covered by the consumer 15 discount company loan is not covered by this law 16 if they don't receive a fee, a direct fee, from 17 the borrower to make the loan.

18 So what do we have? We have 19 situations where all over the Commonwealth there 20 are store fronts, not banks, store fronts
21 advertising payday loans. But then when you go 22 into the store and get the loan, what you get, 23 what you see are documents from a bank. Now, when 24 you go to that store front, it's not a branch of 25 that bank. It just says payday today or cash

1 today. But when you actually get the paperwork,
2 it's from a bank. But the bank's relationship 3 with that transaction disappears once the loan is 4 made. The collections are done by some other 5 entity.

6 And there is substantial belief -- and 7 the Attorney General of New York is pursuing this 8 belief in litigation -- that, in fact, the minute 9 the loan is made by the bank, the store front is 10 required to buy back a majority interest in the 11 loan; in other words, really taking the risk of 12 the loan on themselves.

13 If, in fact, that is happening, the 14 whole thing is really a scam in that the loan 15 really isn't being made by the bank. I mean, the 16 bank is -- you know, in the moment it's being 17 made, made with the bank. But under this 18 contractual arrangement, all the risk is instantly
19 being shifted. So what you have is the store
20 front really doing precisely what the consumer 21 discount company was designed to prevent.

22 So you have some Attorney Generals,
23 for example, Attorney General Spitzer in New York, 24 who is actually suing the store fronts, the 25 industry behind the store fronts, saying this is

1 all a subterfuge. We don't believe that it's 2 really an out-of-state bank.

3 So what this Committee, what the 4 Legislature could do is simply plug the loophole 5 by saying that an arranger, whether or not you get 6 a fee directly from the consumer, an arranger or a 7 broker of these loans is covered by the law.
8 That's all you would have to do. And by that 9 change, that simple change, payday lending would 10 be illegal in Pennsylvania.

11 I want to show you some examples of 12 the transactions. If you go to my prepared
13 testimony to Exhibit 2, it starts with a newspaper 14 add. The page number is hard to see at the 15 bottom. It says P-2. This is the page number I'm 16 asking you to turn to. It's an ad. It says, need 17 cash? Don't wait till payday. This particular ad 18 was running in the Philadelphia Daily News in 19 2003.

20 I might add that that particular store
21 front is not doing this any longer but they were 22 at the time. And this is going on in other store
23 fronts. There is a reference to come in, get cash 24 today. That's the name on the sign on the store
25 front, cash today. And then you see at the bottom

1 that the loans are made by a bank in Delaware.

2 what we did in our office was get a
3 paralegal to apply for one of these loans just so 4 that we would be able to see what, in fact, is 5 happening. They advertise that there was a right 6 of rescision. So I assured her that the minute she 7 signs up, we will get you out of it but we really 8 need to see what these loans look like.

9 what I have attached are the documents
10 that were generated by this loan application. You 11 will see that -- and by the way, when she went 12 there, the sign was cash today. It was right next 13 door to a check casher that was renting the space.
14 You will see that she has to give information 15 about her employment and her checking account.

16 Then if you turn the page, this is a
17 feature that I would suspect is on all payday
18 contracts. This is a mandatory arbitration clause 19 so that the consumer applying for one of these 20 rather outrageous loans is also giving up her 21 right to the court system in the event she was 22 mistreated in any way. This is fairly standard.
23 I note there is nothing in 2150 that would prevent 24 this practice.

25 If you turn the page, you will notice

1 that they do give some APR disclosures, that they 2 were advising her that a loan for 14 days would be 3 521 percent. Then if you turn the page again to 4 P-6, this is the actual loan. You will see that 5 what she got was $250 that she was to pay back 6 $300 fourteen days later, and that the annual 7 percentage rate of that transaction was 456.25.
8 You will notice the mandatory arbitration clause.

9 You will notice also something I
10 circled, that we have retained Big Boss, LLC to 11 service your loan. I didn't make this up. This 12 is what the contract provides. By the way, Big 13 Boss, I found out, if you go to the Department of 14 State Corporation Bureau site, Big Boss, Inc. is a 15 Pennsylvania corporation located in Mercer County.
16 I don't know exactly how it operates. But it does 17 suggest that when this borrower gets in trouble, 18 can't make it, that Big Boss is the entity, not 19 the bank in Delaware, that will be coming after 20 her. If you turn to P-8, there you have it.
21 There's the check. You will also notice it's 22 processed by Big Boss.

23 Now, to show you an example of how one 24 of these loans snowballs and, again, to use the 25 example of the $500 refrigerator -- and, Chairman

1 Hasay, you're absolutely right. You stole my 2 thunder when you said, well, what about credit 3 cards. That is exactly right. You could even get 4 a cash advance on them. If it were a cash need, 5 you could get a cash advance on a credit card, 6 very expensive, but a whole lot cheaper than 7 what's here.

8 So then we are talking about this 9 being targeted to basically the tapped out 10 borrower. What in the world kind of policy could 11 we be adopting where we encourage people who are 12 so far overextended that they have tapped out all 13 their cards, to give them yet another chance to 14 get further in debt. It really makes no sense.

15 But I wanted to show you an example of 16 just how crazy I would say -- excuse the 17 vernacular. But I really think that this example 18 speaks for itself. If you turn to P-1, this is 19 actually the page before the newspaper ad in my 20 testimony.

21 What I have done is to generate an 22 example of a $500 loan that is essentially 23 reborrowed five separate times. I also did it in 24 a loan that comes due in seven days. I did it 25 because I want to show you the most extreme

1 example that would be allowed by House Bill 2150.
2 I specifically based this on what is allowed by 3 that bill.

4 I have heard the proponents say that 5 they have made an effort to stop the repetitive
6 borrowing. Well, you have to read the fine print 7 in this bill and you will see that they do no such 8 thing. It is true that they have a definition 9 called renewal loan which means that on day one 10 you come in, you borrow $500 and on the day it 11 comes due, you can't afford to repay it so you pay 12 just the finance charge and you roll that over.
13 And the bill does limit you to one time to do
14 that.

15 However, the law also has a separate 16 category called successive loans. What it allows 17 you to do is, on the same day, make a payday loan 18 to pay off another payday loan. The way the 19 definitions work in this section is they say you 20 can only borrow -- you're limited to a $500 loan.
21 However, you can have up to two loans outstanding 22 at any one time. So you can have up to $1,000.
23 You could literally walk into the store and make a 24 second loan to pay off the first loan. And under 25 House Bill 2150, that's not repeat borrowing.

1 That's called a successive loan.

2 What you can do is you borrow once.
3 You can then do four successive loans. Then the 4 definition of successive loans says, we don't 5 count the first loan as a successive loan. So 6 that means you can effectively get five loans.
7 What I have done here is I have taken the example
8 of a $500 loan that is then refinanced four times
9 through one of these successive loans to show you 10 what happens.

11 I have it as September 1st, 2004. The 12 consumer borrows $500 for 7 days. Now, the APR is 13 going to be higher in seven days but I want to 14 show you the worst example. This bill would allow 15 for a loan coming due in as little as seven 16 days -- and I might ask, just consider, if someone 17 doesn't have $300 on Friday, what are the chances 18 of them having $350 next Friday? I mean, this is 19 just such a set-up.

20 But on September 1st, 2004, you borrow 21 $500 for 7 days. So you get $500 in your pocket.
22 The cost of credit is $87.50. That's the 17.50 23 per 100. So the cost of credit is $87.50. The 24 APR on that seven-day loan is 910 percent. Okay.
25 You go back in a week. You don't have the money.

1 You take out another loan to pay off the first
2 loan.

3 You still only got the original $500.
4 Really, all you're doing now is borrowing money to 5 pay the finance charge. You still only have 6 really the $500 in your pocket. He's not going to 7 be walking out of there with any new dollars. So 8 that's another $87.50. You see that I do that 9 four times. What that gets you by 28 days later, 10 September 29th, is you have paid a total of 437.50 11 to get $500 in one month's time, less than one 12 month, with an effective annual percentage rate of 13 1,141 percent.

14 Now, if the person doesn't pay -- and 15 that's what was asked here. What happens if they 16 just can't pay; there is no money in the account?
17 This bill provides for a charge of $25. It would 18 allow court costs. It would allow attorney fees.
19 It doesn't specify the amount of that. I'm 20 estimating court costs of roughly $250 and 21 attorney fees of roughly $500. That adds up to 22 over $1,200 for the use of that $500 and it
23 doesn't count the charges, the bounced check 24 charges, that are going to be the borrower's own 25 bank.

1 Let me go to the question asked by 2 Representative Allen and Tangretti, what about 3 loan sharking and if we don't do something, aren't 4 we going to just encourage loan sharking? I would 5 say really that was the question raised in 1937 6 and they passed a law to create some kind of 7 business opportunity for legitimate businesses to 8 offer small loans.

9 Now, if 24 percent isn't high enough
10 for the finance companies of this state to make 11 small loans, if we really think it's so urgent to 12 find a way for people whose credit cards are 13 tapped out to borrow yet more and more money, if 14 that is seen as an urgent need, I am sure that we 15 can find a way to stimulate that kind of lending 16 with the existing institutions in this state so 17 that we don't need to essentially legitimize loan
18 sharking.

19 This idea that somehow because there
20 is legal loan sharking going on we need to license 21 it, I mean, it really doesn't make any sense to 22 me. I mean, we can think of a lot of illegal 23 activities going on on the street corners of this 24 Commonwealth that we want to keep illegal and not 25 license. It really, I would suggest, doesn't make

1 a lot of sense.

2 We have to understand the context in 3 which this proposal is being made. The proponents 4 would have us believe that the market is not 5 producing enough credit, that already overextended 6 consumers need yet another way to get further in 7 trouble. This is really not a good thing.

8 When you think about the context of 9 what is going on, our families are already 10 drowning in debt. They owe more than their net
11 worth. Bankruptcies are exploding. Credit card 12 companies are mailing these cards to our children.
13 They offer free gifts as invitations. You see 14 them at the concerts, at the ball games. I was at 15 a Phillies game last week. There they are, get a 16 free something or other and get yet another credit 17 card.

18 There are finance companies mailing
19 live checks out. You have probably seen them in 20 the mail, that if you deposit that check, it 21 becomes a 25 percent loan that's immediately then 22 followed by invitations to, oh, we'll lower the 23 interest rate with a nice, convenient home equity
24 loan.

25 Mortgage brokers are patrolling our

1 communities looking for senior citizens trusting
2 enough to assume mortgage obligations they didn't 3 ask for and can't afford. Foreclosures are 4 exploding out of sight everywhere in the 5 Commonwealth fueled largely by the increase in 6 these subprime high-cost refinancing.

7 This is the context of this bill and I
8 ask this Committee, why do we need more? This 9 bill, this particular bill that is being proposed, 10 is a very bad bill. I, in my written testimony, 11 lay out some of the specific reasons in this bill 12 why I believe it's a bad bill. We have already 13 heard the fact that it authorizes extortionist
14 interest rates and I have given you some examples 15 of just how bad they are.

16 It encourages perpetual debt by 17 allowing an endless chain of payday loans. And 18 the example I gave you shows that. It encourages 19 perpetual debt by failing to require lenders to 20 accept installment repayments, thereby pushing 21 borrowers into further payday lending.

22 Now, the proponents are claiming that 23 House Bill 2150 does give borrowers the 24 opportunity for an individual to enter into a 25 long-term repayment plan. But the provision in

1 the law is very, very weak. It does not apply 2 until the consumer has taken out five loans,
3 consecutive loans or renews it one time. In other 4 words, it would not be allowed -- in that example 5 I gave you, you went through every one of those 6 loans and only then would a repayment be offered.

7 This is much less than the industry
8 has agreed to in other states such as Florida's 9 requirement that anytime a consumer is unable to 10 repay a payday loan, there is a free 60-day
11 extension provided the consumer goes to consumer 12 credit counseling, in which case the payday lender
13 must comply with the counselor's repayment plan.

14 Moreover, under the language proposed,
15 the limited right to repayment is only triggered 16 if the consumer requests it in person on the due 17 date of the loan, not a day earlier or a day 18 later. I mean, it's almost like a got you kind of 19 provision the way it's described. Oh, you didn't 20 ask for it at the right time and place so we're 21 not going to give it to you.

22 It does not prohibit payday lenders
23 from lending to borrowers they know cannot repay 24 the loan. When a borrower comes in and they can't 25 pay the loan that they got last week and you offer

1 them another loan, that is lending without regard 2 to payment ability. It should not happen.

3 I think the evidence that Beth 4 McConnell testified to about the evidence in other 5 states is very, very compelling and the witness 6 from North Carolina from the Center of Responsible 7 Lending will be able to give you more detail on 8 that.

9 As Ms. McConnell mentioned, it does 10 not prohibit payday lenders from operating at or 11 near gambling establishments which, given what the 12 Legislature has recently authorized, is a really 13 important thing to consider. You can be sure that 14 if House Bill 2150 is passed, the minute the slot 15 parlors open up, ringing right around the 16 perimeter of that establishment will be payday
17 lenders eager to fuel gambling addictions.

18 House Bill 2150 would reverse the 19 70-year-old policy that I described that was 20 behind the Consumer Discount Act.

21 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Mr. Ackelsberg, I 22 understand what you're saying in your comments and 23 you're very informed in the comments that you've 24 given to Committee. But we're not considering the 25 bill. We're taking information on the bill. The

1 purpose of the hearing here today was to have our 2 members informed as to what payday lending is all
3 about. So we haven't gotten to that step. There
4 may be other bills introduced that go in a 5 different direction after the hearing. But the 6 Committee has the fortune of Secretary Schenek, 7 the Secretary of Banking, to hear from him later.
8 Go ahead.

9 MR. ACKELSBURG: I want to wrap up. I
10 wanted to call your attention to the last 11 attachment. I have attached language that could 12 be an amendment to the Consumer Discount Company 13 Act that would very clearly and easily ban the 14 practice from Pennsylvania. It could be done.
15 There have been members referenced asking, well, 16 what could we do? And here is a suggestion of how 17 to do it.

18 In conclusion, the payday lending
19 business is debt pushing of the worst sort. It is 20 loan sharking wrapped in the mantle of a 21 respectable business. Just because the business 22 has the aura of respectability, because it has 23 lawyers and lobbyists working for it does not 24 change the basic character of the business. We 25 don't have to legalize this outrageous, usurious

1 and immoral business just because there are people 2 doing it already. What we should be doing is 3 kicking them out of our state. Thank you and I'll 4 take your questions.

5 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you, Mr.
6 Ackelsberg. You have been very informative. You 7 have certainly done a lot of work in this area.
8 We probably have a couple questions. The Chair
9 recognized the gentleman from Westmoreland, Mr.
10 Tangretti.

11 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Thank you,
12 Mr. Chairman. Let me first thank you for your 13 very compelling testimony and to clear up just a 14 minor misrepresentation of what I asked.

15 MR. ACKELSBERG: Sorry about that.

16 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: That's 17 okay. But given the nature of everything, I want 18 to make sure that we all understand what we're 19 talking about. I asked Ms. McConnell, is there 20 anything that she felt that could, in fact,
21 improve the bill that would be acceptable and I 22 referenced Chairman Allen's question because he 23 was on the same lines.

24 I did not suggest -- and I'm not 25 suggesting that there is anything wrong with this

1 necessarily. But I did not suggest that loan
2 sharking would now become prevalent if we did not 3 have something in place dealing with payday
4 lending. As a matter of fact, in talking to my 5 colleague, Mr. Wansacz, it occurred to me that if 6 we didn't have payday lending, we would go back to 7 where we were before.

8 It seems to me that what you just 9 stated made the most sense, among other things, 10 and that is that legitimizing it by virtue of 11 having a store front separates it out from what we 12 all know as loan sharking where you would have to 13 go in an alley somewhere or the back room of a bar 14 or some other place.

15 As a consequence, it seems to me we 16 have now allowed for it. If that, in fact, is the 17 case -- apparently, it is -- we have now allowed 18 for individuals to assume, by virtue of the fact 19 that they are advertising and they have a sign on 20 the front of the store front, that it is, in fact, 21 legal and appropriate and it's above board and 22 it's okay because somebody must be looking out for 23 my interests and it's an encouragement for them to 24 use that service to be contrasted with loan
25 sharking.

1 I thought it was essential, if you
2 will permit me, to clarify that one position of 3 mine. Thank you.

4 MR. ACKELSBURG: Can I respond?

5 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Please.

6 MR. ACKELSBURG: What I think implicit
7 in your comment, I think, is the question that was 8 also asked of the previous witnesses. Could one 9 come up with a bill hypothetically that did 10 provide small loans at rates that were not through 11 the roof with consumer protections? I think the 12 answer to that is sure, of course, it could.

13 In fact, I, myself, did a little of 14 that exercise when the last version of this -- I
15 think in last session it was called House Bill 16 1808. And I was doing exactly that. I'm sitting 17 in my office and trying to come up with something 18 like that. But as previous witnesses have said, I 19 suspect that those asking you to pass this bill 20 and authorize payday lending are not real 21 interested in that kind of responsible lending.

22 My guess is that if you call their 23 bluff and came up with a bill that did just that, 24 that they would basically say we're not 25 interested. They are in the business of doing the

1 kind of loans that were in that example. That's 2 my sense of it. And it's based not just on -- I'm 3 not saying that out of thin air. It's based on 4 the research done nationally about what these same 5 companies are, in fact, doing when they have 6 gotten the authority of the legitimization that 7 you suggest might be in the consumer's interest.

8 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Thank you.

9 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The other gentleman
10 from Westmoreland, Mr. Casorio, has a question.

11 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
12 Chairman Hasay. Your $500 refrigerator is getting 13 a lot of use today. Mr. Ackelsberg, thank you for 14 being here today. I appreciate you coming. I 15 have just a couple of observations and then maybe 16 pointing to some of your testimony.

17 You said earlier about a scheme and 18 the business is running a scheme on individuals.
19 I was thinking the exact same thing, when you were 20 talking about the 1930s and so forth. It 21 certainly does sound like certain businesses 22 operating a pawning scheme on consumers in this 23 type of economic environment, if you will. I 24 thought that was pretty poignant.

25 We are talking about certain bills and

1 the Chairman was kind enough to hold these 2 informative hearings because for myself and I 3 think the majority of the members, this has been 4 an eye opening for everyone and that's what these 5 hearings are planned for.

6 Again, I'm going to say if this isn't 7 criminal behavior -- and I'm going to point to 8 something. If it isn't criminal behavior -- and I
9 purposely leave a long pause there -- then it
10 certainly is predatory. There is no question 11 about that in my mind. You have given us page P-6 12 and we have all seen these before. It's the 13 statement with the annual percentage rate and the 14 finance charge. And that annual percentage rate 15 up in the corner is 456.25.

16 These are the kind of forms we see 17 when we go to the credit union to finance -- my 18 personal car is 4.99 percent. When we go to 19 refinance our home mortgage, it's 6.25 percent or 20 thereabouts. This is a 456.25 percent yearly 21 rate. And that's an understatement because from 22 your example, what you gave us before on the five 23 times that folks could do successive loans, to me,
24 it's somewhere in the 900 percentile of an APR 25 rate. That is just a glaring example of what is

1 going on here.

2 I mean, in my estimation, this isn't a 3 solution in search of a problem. There is 4 certainly a problem out there. And, no, we can't 5 take care of everybody and, no, we can't keep 6 people from gambling or smoking or drinking. But 7 we can certainly, I believe, protect some of the 8 most vulnerable segments of society against this 9 kind of behavior.

10 If you poll anyone, I think they would 11 say that this is certainly, again, at minimum, 12 predatory behavior and tries to rip people off,
13 seniors, folks that are making $5.15 an hour
14 working two or three jobs. This is outrageous.

15 I want to thank you for your testimony 16 and really for this glaring example of that annual 17 percentage rate sheet that really brings it home 18 in terms of all of us who have probably done some 19 refinancing or purchasing over the last several 20 years.

21 MR. ACKELSBERG: Thank you,
22 Representative.

23 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
24 Chairman Hasay.

25 CHAIRMAN HASAY: You have been very

1 informative and we appreciate that. Members of 2 the Committee appreciates all the work you have 3 done in this area. We have one final question
4 from the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Thomas.

5 REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS: Thank you, Mr.
6 Chairman. Mr. Ackelsberg, I want to thank you for 7 your testimony. It was on point and I know that 8 it heightened all of our understanding with 9 respect to this practice. I have one question.
10 You've been before this Committee and other 11 Committees on several occasions and I see my 12 friend over there from the banking industry.

13 Should we really be talking about 14 making some changes because payday lending, check 15 cashing, all of this seems to have come about as a 16 result of deregulating the banking industry over a 17 decade ago. So if we take payday lending today, 18 what will people have to look forward to tomorrow?
19 Should we really be talking about the banking code
20 and how we could make banking a more friendlier
21 industry in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania?

22 MR. ACKELSBERG: That's a wonderful
23 question. Probably to do it justice would require 24 more time than I think the Chair would allow me.
25 But you certainly asked the right question. Let 1 me answer the question a number of ways.

2 First of all, the notion that the 3 lending of money is something that's inherently 4 prone to overreaching, that the lending of money 5 is an area that deserves special protection from 6 government is something as old as the Bible.

7 The notion of usury has been there
8 really as long -- and it goes back way back before 9 the country was founded. This is a very, very old 10 and well-sold notion that people who are desperate 11 for money should not be taken advantage of. I 12 mean, that's just a simple statement of western 13 tradition and I use western very broadly because, 14 as I said, it goes back to the Bible and all the 15 old books.

16 what happened is that despite those 17 thousands of years of tradition, we went through 18 what I believe to have been a deregulation frenzy 19 that began in the 1980s. And I think that what 20 we're seeing is the consequence of that in the 21 area of financial services.

22 Now, there is no question that it has 23 brought some good. We only have to look at all 24 the wonderful financial service opportunities that 25 most Americans have at their fingertips at the 1 click of a mouse. But we have to understand that 2 there's been a whole second parallel system that 3 some economists have described as financial 4 apartheid that has grown up through this 5 deregulation.

6 The fact that there are some 7 Americans, white and black, mainly working poor, 8 who don't deal with banks at all, who are dealing 9 with check cashers and rent-to-own outfits and 10 pawnshops and now these payday lenders and this 11 whole underground has to be looked at. We have to 12 return to the notion that state government has a 13 critical role to protect those who are in need of 14 protection in the area of lending, in the area of 15 consumer credit.

16 I also want to mention two things in 17 closing. One is that probably the most important 18 thing that state government can do in this area of 19 what to do when you need $300 to buy a 20 refrigerator or, to use another example, get a new 21 radiator, probably the most important thing state 22 government can do would be to try to create a 23 situation where every Pennsylvanian had a $300 24 savings account.

25 I mean, imagine that. Imagine if

1 people had a $300 saving account so they could 2 deal with emergencies. This problem is caused by 3 the fact that we're in this new world and nobody 4 has savings. We are completely tapped out and 5 that really needs to be reversed.

6 The last thing I want to say, just 7 because I don't want to leave it hanging, I know, 8 Representative Thomas, that you asked about the 9 check cashers. I just remembered that you had 10 asked that question and Ms. McConnell had 11 mentioned that I could answer that for you. The 12 reason I would submit that you don't see the check 13 cashers pushing House Bill 2150 or other versions
14 is that the check cashing law specifically 15 prohibits them from engaging in payday lending.

16 Now, that hasn't prevented some of 17 them from setting up different companies next door
18 that are trying to do this rent-a-bank payday
19 lending. But the law is clear that a check casher 20 in this Commonwealth cannot do payday lending.

21 And the proponents of this bill and 22 others, from my understanding, they are not 23 suggesting that that be repealed or changed in any 24 way. What they are really I think trying to do is 25 set up a competitive kind of network where you

1 have these stand-alone payday companies that are 2 not in check cashing places. So basically what 3 you have are the check cashers on one side and the 4 national payday lenders on the other. I think the 5 national payday lenders in this bill and others 6 are looking to basically be able to do this 7 without competition from the check cashers.

8 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you very much,
9 Mr. Ackelsberg, very much. You have been very 10 informative. I appreciate those articles as well.
11 Next we have Ms. Yolanda McGill. She is with the 12 Center for Responsible Lending. Ms. McGill, thank 13 you for coming today and have a seat. You can 14 proceed as soon as you're ready. Thank you very 15 much.

16 MS. MCGILL: Thank you very much, Mr.
17 Chairman, and I appreciate the opportunity to come 18 here and speak with you today. I want to direct 19 you to the materials that I brought. I didn't 20 prepare remarks because I didn't want to duplicate 21 the efforts of the prior testifiers. I want to 22 direct you to the three pieces I brought. The 23 first is a greenish sheet that talks about the 24 Center for Responsible Lending. The second one is 25 the "Be Wary" sheet and that will be the sheet

1 that I will be speaking from. The third document
2 is actually a copy of the Georgia bill that's been 3 mentioned here a couple of times for your future 4 reference.

5 I'm just going to go down the "Be 6 wary" sheet and I also want to go back to some of 7 the questions that were brought up earlier. But I 8 really actually want to be here as a resource.

9 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you.

10 MS. MCGILL: A little bit about 11 myself, again, I am Yolanda McGill, Policy Counsel
12 with the Center for Responsible Lending. It says 13 up at the top there what our mission is. The 14 center is dedicated to protecting home ownership
15 and family wealth by working to eliminate abusive 16 financial practices. We are a non-profit, 17 non-partisan research advocacy organization that 18 promotes responsible lending practices and access 19 to fair terms of credit for low-wealth families.

20 We are based in North Carolina. We 21 also have a DC office. We do work nationwide. So 22 my background in this is, actually, I have been 23 involved directly in the legislative efforts both 24 in North Carolina on payday lending and also in 25 the Georgia situation. So I do have experience in

1 negotiating legislation and working with the 2 industry on these types of things and my comments
3 will be based on that background.

4 As we go to the sheet here, I did want
5 to just point out that as some of the prior 6 testifiers have said -- and I think this is very, 7 very important -- as you consider the bill that's 8 before you or bills that might come up in the 9 future -- I think Mr. Ackelsberg and also the 10 fellow from the AFL-CIO's filaments are squarely
11 that where the rubber hits the road for payday 12 lending is with repeat borrowing. It is in the 13 loan flipping. It is in the fees. It is a 14 business model. This is based on our research.

15 But also in our negotiations with the 16 industry, we have tried to come to the table and 17 try to get a resolution around payday lending. I
18 think North Carolina, as it was mentioned earlier, 19 our law did sunset and the industry has been 20 trying to push for reauthorization since then.

21 Where we noticed in our negotiations
22 we could not make any progress was on this issue
23 of the successive transactions. This was cause 24 for concern for us and we started looking into it.
25 Our research indicates that the business model is

1 based on this. There are several studies out
2 there that indicate this and our negotiations
3 could not move forward on this particular point.
4 We felt like this bore this out.

5 What I would also like to emphasize in 6 my remarks is that regulation is regulation. It 7 takes many forms. Mr. Ackelsberg did bring up the 8 point that the Consumer Discount Law is the small 9 loan law here in the books in Pennsylvania. That 10 is, indeed, regulation.

11 That is what happened in Georgia. The 12 decision there was taken that when it came down to 13 regulating payday lending, they had a small loan 14 law in the books, the Georgia Industrial Loan Act.
15 So the way that they decided to regulate the 16 payday lending industry there was to tighten the 17 penalties up for the loan laws that were already 18 on the books and said, okay, you've been breaking 19 our law down here.

20 Now, instead of a slap on the wrist, 21 because they had enforcement actions going on 22 being brought by the insurance commissioner down
23 there who regulates industrial loans, these people 24 were just shutting down their stores and moving 25 next door, reopening and continuing. So what this

1 bill did was, in effect, make the penalties pretty 2 high and increased the price for breaking these 3 laws. They did deem it to be illegal and now they 4 have the tools in place.

5 That law was challenged. Advance
6 America and their banking partner, Bankwest, along 7 with three other sets of Plaintiffs did sue the 8 Attorney General and the Secretary of State to get 9 a preliminary injunction. They failed in that 10 attempt. So these shops have had to leave 11 Georgia.

12 The recent case that was brought by 13 Governor Barnes was against 60 to 100 shops that 14 failed to close down. But the other ones did 15 close shop. Advance America had 86 stores in 16 Georgia running on this illegal bank model and 17 according to the papers they filed in that case, 18 they were making a million dollars a month in 19 Georgia in those 86 stores; at least that's what 20 they put in their pleadings.

21 Again, I would also like to emphasize 22 that in considering payday lending regulation, 23 this whole idea of regulation really should be 24 based on exactly what you're doing now, gathering 25 all the information, listening to all the sides

1 and really coming up with the best model for 2 Pennsylvanians.

3 What we have seen time and again is,
4 again, what was referred to earlier, this idea of,
5 well, we have to have this particular type of 6 regulation and we just can't function otherwise 7 and if you try to pass something that caps these 8 fees, they answer and either say, A, we can't 9 operate under that and that's not our business 10 model or, B, you're not authorized to do that 11 because we are an agent of an out-of-state bank.

12 I would submit that both of those are 13 incorrect. You can authorize payday lending to 14 the level that you see fit. Whether or not you 15 decide to extend a different type of licensing 16 regime or not, whether you decide to stick with 17 what you already have. That really is up to you.

18 Anti-brokering is the key to plug the 19 loophole. I believe the Representative from the 20 table over there asked about what could be done 21 with respect to these banks that are coming in and 22 assisting in these loans being made. Again, 23 anti-brokering has been very effective in 24 Maryland. They have an anti-brokering provision 25 that they added to their Consumer Credit Act.

1 Again, they didn't pass a payday law.
2 They said, we have legislation already. We have a 3 consumer credit act. We are going to add an 4 anti-brokering provision to that act. It's two 5 lines basically. It just says, by the way, you 6 are not allowed to arrange a loan that is in 7 violation of this act. They have no payday
8 lending there. We did a recent survey. We found 9 two shops -- that's it -- in Maryland, as opposed 10 to Pennsylvania where you guys have a little over 11 200 shops here. Georgia had over 400.

12 Another example that is worth noting 13 when you're dealing with this is the example of 14 Texas. I can point any Legislator or regulator 15 that's trying to deal with payday lending to 16 Texas. According to the industry, Texas is not a 17 payday state. Texas does not have regulation.
18 However, if you look at the statutes in Texas and 19 the administrative code, they, indeed, have a 20 payday regulation.

21 Now, why is this? why are people
22 differing on this? We would submit that it's 23 because the code in Texas authorizes triple-digit 24 interest rate but it's not as high as the typical 25 model. It's a sliding scale. Basically, in

1 Texas, a lender can make a $100 loan for 14 days
2 and get a 300 percent interest rate. But the way
3 the Texas Legislature decided to do it was that 4 the bigger the loan is, the lower the fee and the 5 longer the loan is outstanding, that changes the 6 fee as well. This is an attempt, again, to build 7 in some type of consumer protection.

8 The industry's reaction to this is to 9 ignore it, that Texas has 1,000 of these 10 rent-a-bank operators, even though there is a 11 statute there in place. So this doesn't happen
12 just in places where there is no special safe
13 harbor. Even in places where there is a safe 14 harbor, what we have seen is the industry, if they 15 are not getting the fees they want, they have gone
16 to this rent-a-bank option which is why everybody
17 is encouraging anti-brokering. That must be a 18 part of the equation no matter what you do.

19 If we turn to the back of my sheet, we 20 also talk about some of these best practices. I
21 think Mr. Ackelsberg covered it so well that I 22 don't know if I can actually add anything to that.
23 But, again, there is some caution. I know we're 24 not talking about 2150 because it can change.

25 This whole issue of the payment

1 option, again, is something that should be looked 2 at and we have here in this little gray box some 3 of the provisions that we have seen that the 4 industry has presented as, quote/unquote, consumer 5 protections.

6 But really the devil is in the details
7 and we would caution you that when the language is 8 being put forth, to really work it out, just like 9 Mr. Ackelsberg had done in his worst-case 10 scenario, and really see how these things all hang 11 together.

12 Another thing I wanted to point out 13 about 2150 is that I noted in there that it would 14 actually codify the rent-a-bank situation.
15 There's a definition in there for a small loan 16 lender and there's a definition for a small loan 17 broker which is the opposite of the 18 recommendations that you've been hearing from the 19 previous testifiers and from myself.

20 That would be the opposite of 21 anti-brokering. That would be actually saying, 22 yes, this law covers these purported agents of 23 out-of-state banks. And what that does is that 24 opens up, again, this ability for these people to 25 basically cherry pick like they did in Texas.

1 That's exactly what you would be doing, codifying
2 the Texas situation. Either we do it by the state 3 rules or we don't. I think those were actually my 4 comments. So I would be happy to take questions.

5 CHAIRMAN HASAY: We very much
6 appreciate your time coming here today, from the 7 Committee, and giving us information on the Center 8 for Responsible Lending. Since Maryland and 9 Georgia has closed those shops, do those folks get 10 out of that borrowing mode that they are in and 11 get a little more normal, responsible in their 12 finances?

13 MS. MCGILL: They do. I mean, the 14 idea of the customer demand and the repeat 15 customer, that is something that should be really 16 looked at closely. Just as you have heard here, 17 when you have that borrower walk in for the first 18 time, sure, maybe they are interested in getting a 19 payday loan. And the payday industry would say, 20 our customers love us. This person came back ten 21 times. But you have to ask yourself, did they 22 come back ten times voluntarily or did they come 23 back ten times because they didn't have a way to 24 pay off that loan? That's really the issue here.

25 Yes, maybe the first time they were

1 fine. Maybe the first time they got a coupon just 2 like I did last Sunday in a mailer that came to my 3 house that was a coupon from First American Cash 4 Advance that said, for first-time customers, your 5 first cash advance is free. Now, why would you
6 make that offer if you weren't assuming that I
7 would be back? It's very interesting.

8 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you. The 9 gentleman from Monroe, Mr. Scavello.

10 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: Thank you,
11 Mr. Chairman, and thank you, Ms. McGill, for your 12 testimony. First, I would not fix my 13 refrigerator. I would buy it brand new and get 90 14 days no interest and then there's a saver as well.
15 You mentioned that Maryland took care of it and 16 Georgia as well. Delaware, in Mr. Ackelsberg's
17 testimony, there's an example there of Sun Coast
18 Bank of Delaware in Rehoboth. Have they done 19 anything or are they doing payday lending in 20 Delaware?

21 MS. MCGILL: County Bank of Rehoboth
22 beach is one of the state-chartered FDIC banks
23 that support payday lending store fronts. Yes,
24 County Bank is one of the more egregious 25 offenders. It is a very small state bank. It is

1 located in Delaware, a place that actually 2 authorizes payday lending.

3 County Bank, however, offers no payday
4 loans in its branches. Not only that, when you
5 read its servicing agreements with its payday
6 partners, it prohibits these people from opening
7 shops in Delaware. In other words, they don't do
8 it in their own backyard. County Bank partners 9 with payday lenders in North Carolina. They 10 partner with payday lenders -- they used to do it 11 in Georgia. They partner with payday lenders all 12 over the country but they don't do it in Delaware.

13 There are also some banks out of South
14 Dakota that do it. The largest bank that does 15 this is Republic Bank of Kentucky. Again, they 16 don't do it in Kentucky. They do it in other 17 places.

18 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: That's 19 interesting because I have property just below the 20 branch of Rehoboth there.

21 MS. MCGILL: You had no idea.

22 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: I had no
23 idea. And to be honest, the property in that area
24 goes for about 600,000 in the Rehoboth area. So I 25 couldn't imagine somebody needing a payday loan

1 for $300 or so.

2 MS. MCGILL: County Bank has about 23
3 partnerships the last we counted.

4 REPRESENTATIVE SCAVELLO: What a way
5 to do business and take advantage of people.
6 Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

7 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from
8 Lackawanna, Mr. Wansacz, has a question.

9 REPRESENTATIVE WANSACZ: Thank you,
10 Mr. Chairman. Keeping with this present theme of 11 refrigerators, say a person that borrows and gets 12 into trouble -- and we've been hearing testimony 13 after testimony about the people that do get in 14 trouble. What would you recommend to the people
15 out there that are watching? What should they do 16 that are in a situation with no hope to get out of 17 this? I haven't heard anybody address that yet.
18 I am wondering if you could address that.

19 MS. MCGILL: Absolutely. The Center
20 for Responsible Lending is an affiliate with a 21 redevelopment financial institution called 22 Self-help Credit Union. Credit unions actually 23 are a great place to go for small credit. First 24 of all, we also have the idea of the small loan 25 lender. You do have small lenders in

1 Pennsylvania. You have a small loan law. We 2 would encourage that. That is cheaper.

3 We would also encourage you to think
4 about the relationships that you have. It's true
5 credit unions are membership based. Our credit 6 union, though, for instance, is not. You just 7 have to live in a certain geographic area. There
8 are many credits unions that are like that. You
9 can also think about your employer. I remember I 10 got a cash advance from my employer when I was 11 waiting tables. That's probably not very common 12 but that's another place you could go.

13 You could also consider your relief
14 societies. You should talk to a credit counselor
15 if you are in trouble. There are good credit 16 counseling agencies out there. We actually do 17 make sure that people have someplace to go. We 18 actually encourage them to talk to their churches.

19 There are so many community
20 organizations out there. Even if you can't get a 21 loan from that particular place, they can direct 22 you where you can. There are some places that are 23 care outfits that maybe have a slush fund that can 24 give you a little bit of money and get you started 25 and get you going someplace else.

1 But the point about the payday loan
2 situation is that it will make your situation 3 worse. Getting a loan that you cannot afford is 4 not going to improve your situation.

5 REPRESENTATIVE WANSACZ: If I may,
6 thank you for telling people where they can go.
7 I'm talking about the person that has taken out 8 that loan to buy a refrigerator with the payday 9 loan. Once they are caught in a situation, what 10 should they do? What advice can you give them?

11 MS. MCGILL: There are great -- we 12 call them victim funds. Again, if they are in the 13 military, the Navy and Army Relief Society does 14 help with these loans specifically and definitely 15 go to a credit counselor because something that we 16 found in our negotiations is that it's almost 17 impossible for the borrower to do a work-out plan 18 with a payday lender. It just doesn't happen.
19 They say, no, bring us a fee or pay it off.

20 We try to get people to go to credit 21 counselors. Unfortunately, it has come up where 22 credit counselors have said we haven't been able 23 to work with these people, that you need another 24 intermediary there. So go to them, get an 25 attorney that will write a demand letter so that

1 you can get your installment payments going. That 2 really is the key. Most people that we interact 3 with do want to pay this off. They really do.
4 These are not dead beats. They just don't 5 understand why they keep giving them 50 bucks
6 every couple of weeks and the loan never goes 7 away. The key is to somehow get a situation that 8 you can get on installments.

9 Unfortunately, what we're seeing is 10 that you usually can't do that directly. So you 11 need to go get an advocate, whether it's a 12 counselor or an attorney or even a bank person. A 13 lot of bank officers, credit union officers, 14 community bank officers will intervene for you.
15 So you should get an advocate. That's what I 16 would recommend. And United Way and those type of 17 agencies will help as well.

18 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you very much,
19 Ms. McGill and I thank the Center for Responsible 20 Lending as well for very much enlightening the 21 members of the Committee. Thank you very much.

22 MS. MCGILL: Thank you.

23 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Next we have Carol
24 Stewart. Carol is the vice president of Advance 25 America, Community Financial Services Association

1 of America. Thank you for coming, Carol. We 2 appreciate it. We would like to hear what you 3 have to say today in your testimony.

4 MS. STEWART: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
5 I apologize ahead of time for not having my 6 comments reduced to writing. I travel all over 7 the country testifying before Committees for the 8 Community Financial Services Association of 9 America. Some Committees ask for written 10 testimony and others do not. So I am happy, if 11 you need for me to do so, to reduce my comments to 12 writing and present them after the fact to the 13 Committee, if you would like.

14 CHAIRMAN HASAY: That will be fine.
15 We have a stenographer here for that.

16 MS. STEWART: Thank you. My name is 17 Carol Stewart and I'm here on behalf of the 18 Community Financial Services Association of 19 America which is the national trade association
20 for payday lending. I also represent Advance 21 America which is the largest payday lender in the 22 country. We have a little over 2,200 stores
23 across the country.

24 I want to begin with giving you a 25 little bit about my background before I start. My

1 background actually is not in financial services,
2 but it's in education. I was a fifth grade
3 teacher and kindergarten teacher longer than I 4 care to remember. From there, I became an 5 elementary school principal. I have a doctorate 6 in elementary education. I left the world of 7 school districts to go to work for the Legislature 8 in 1990. And for a decade, I worked on education
9 policy; first as a research director in the House 10 Education Committee and later as a Governor's 11 Education Senior Advisor. I went from there to 12 the State Chamber of Commerce where I worked on 13 issues including removing the Confederate flag off 14 of the state flagstone, as well as a number of 15 other business issues for the chamber.

16 When I received a call from one of our 17 chamber board members asking me to consider coming 18 to work for a payday lender on a national basis, 19 it took me about two months of research to make a 20 decision about whether this truly was an industry
21 I wished to represent. I had reputational issues, 22 personally, that I wanted to make sure that I felt 23 comfortable with in terms of representing this 24 industry.

25 I will tell you I just celebrated,

1 August 6th, my third year representing Advance
2 America across the country. And I can tell you
3 not one day has gone by that I have not been proud 4 of the way that my company offers the payday
5 advance service.

6 I have been in stores all across the 7 country and I have heard story after story from 8 customers firsthand and from our branch managers 9 and our front-line staff about the good work that 10 we have done in loaning people money when they 11 have needed it most, including the most 12 heart-wrenching story I've heard, which is one in 13 Harrisburg. I took Representative Ross to one of 14 our stores and had someone tell us right after 15 September 11th that the only way she could go 16 visit her brother in the hospital was by getting a 17 loan from our company and getting an airline 18 ticket to go up and visit him.

19 While there are horror stories out
20 there -- are there unscrupulous payday lenders out
21 there? Absolutely. Is there a way to clean up 22 the industry by regulating it? Absolutely. I'm 23 here to talk with you today about how best we feel 24 from our perspective to make that work.

25 My company started in 1997. Advance

1 America started with nothing. We have grown very,
2 very quickly as a result of consumer demand. The 3 consumer demand is out there, as you have heard 4 previously, because banks stopped making signature 5 loans and there are very few alternatives for 6 consumers to get $500, $300, $250 for a short 7 period of time.

8 The way that the loan works has been 9 explained to you. It's a relatively short 10 application. We see a customer's pay stub or 11 their source of income statement and a bank 12 statement. They write a personal check out for 13 the amount advanced plus the fee and then they 14 sign a loan agreement. They tell us when they are 15 going to come back in and pay us off which is 16 typically the next payday. Our loans are 17 typically a 14 day to a 19 day loan and the fees 18 average nationwide about $17.50 per hundred.

19 Why would somebody need this? Well,
20 no one has really talked today about the options 21 out there that our customers tell us that they 22 think they have that are more expensive than a 23 payday advance. If you look at bouncing checks, 24 that bounced check charge to our customers is 25 much, much higher.

1 As a matter of fact, I have some 2 comparisons, Mr. Chairman. On a 14-day term, the 3 annual percentage rate on $100 credit card balance
4 with a $27 late fee is 704 percent APR. A $100
5 check that bounces with a $29 NSF fee and a 6 merchant fee which is typically about $25, that's 7 a 1,407 percent APR. An overdraft fee of $35 on a
8 $100 check is a 913 percent APR. A $100 utility 9 bill that has to be reconnected will have a 10 reconnect fee and a late fee of $57. That's a 11 1,486 percent APR. Even using your ATM machine, a 12 one-day term, with a withdrawal fee of $1.49 on 13 $100 for a one-day term is 544 percent APR.

14 Now, we don't normally think about 15 those kinds of fees in terms of an APR but I can 16 tell you that our customers do. They understand 17 exactly what happens if they don't have this 18 particular loan from us. Their options typically 19 are bouncing those checks and having those fees
20 that I just mentioned associated with bouncing 21 those checks assessed to them.

22 Who are our customers? We have heard
23 a lot today about who our customers are. Let me 24 give you some data from our industry. Our 25 customers are middle income, middle educated,

1 working families. Forty-two percent of them own
2 their homes. Ninety-four percent of them have a
3 high school diploma. Fifty-six percent of them
4 have been to college. Sixty-eight percent of them
5 are under forty-five years of age. And the 6 majority have a salary between $25,000 and $50,000
7 per year. A hundred percent of them have a steady 8 income and have a bank account.

9 They choose to use our product, they 10 tell us in our customer surveys, for several 11 reasons. One is convenience. Two is to avoid the 12 less desirable alternatives that I just mentioned.
13 The third one is for privacy. Could they go to 14 their employer? Could they go to members of their 15 families? Could they go to their friends or their 16 churches? Absolutely. And some of them have that 17 option. Some of them don't have that option. But 18 for privacy purposes and for their own dignity, a 19 number of our customers tell us they choose to 20 handle these transactions in private and not by 21 going to any of those people.

22 Most of them tell us that they go to 23 us because they understand exactly what that loan
24 costs. We charge a fee for our product. There 25 are no closing costs. There are no balloon

1 payments. There are no administrative fees or 2 hidden fees attached to a payday loan. It is a 3 straight, fully-disclosed fee per hundred for that 4 product. And they tell us that they choose it 5 because it's cheaper. Customers know what they 6 are doing and they know that they are capable of 7 making their own decisions.

8 The fact is millions use it. We 9 extend between $25 billion and $30 billion of 10 credit per year as an industry. Our customers are 11 overwhelmingly satisfied. In the states that 12 regulate payday lending, those regulators tell us
13 that they receive virtually no consumer complaints 14 about the industry and how the product is offered.

15 Having said that, CFSA and Advance
16 America support strict regulation of the industry.
17 The majority of states have enacted legislation.
18 As a matter of fact, Alaska's Governor just signed 19 a bill into law as a new law regulating the 20 industry which puts us up to 36 states and the 21 District of Columbia now regulating payday
22 lending.

23 Our association's mission is to raise 24 our standards. The best way to do that is by 25 regulation that requires all companies to live up

1 to a set of industry regulations. CFSA has 2 adopted best practices both in general and for 3 military use. Companies cannot belong to the 4 trade association without annually signing a 5 statement saying that their companies abide by 6 those best practices.

7 Those best practices include some of 8 the things you have heard today like the next day 9 right of rescision, that the customer can undo a 10 loan. If they take out a loan and decide they 11 shouldn't have that loan for some reason or they 12 had an alternative in terms of how to come up with 13 that money, they can rescind that loan free of 14 charge.

15 We believe in full disclosure of those 16 terms, not only in terms of the fee amount, but 17 also as an APR. Those best practices include a 18 limitation or a ban on rollovers depending on what 19 a state decides. Some states choose to ban 20 rollovers completely, which you have heard today
21 about paying that fee back without paying the loan 22 amount. Other states allow a limited number of 23 rollovers.

24 Consumers should have access to 25 short-term credit but we think they should be

1 protected, too. I would like to talk just a
2 minute about how I'm here today, what has happened 3 today in Pennsylvania. We received a call several 4 years ago from Representative Chris Ross who sits
5 on the Council of State Governments, the suggested 6 state legislative committee. This is the 7 Committee for Council of State Governments that 8 studies trends across the country and adopts model 9 legislation for states to look at.

10 Some of the Legislators on that 11 Committee have been in states that had regulated 12 payday lending and had made the decision that the 13 Council of State Governments ought to look at that 14 trend and look at a number of ways of regulating 15 that industry across the country. Chris sat on 16 that Committee and took part in the debate and the 17 deliberation about what made sense in terms of 18 fair and balanced legislation that allowed this 19 product to be offered to consumers but also put 20 every consumer protection in place that it 21 possible could.

22 I believe it was three years ago,
23 maybe, Mr. Chairman, that Chris Ross originally 24 came forward with legislation. I think there were 25 a couple of Committee meetings with some testimony

1 taken at that time. We sat down with a number of 2 members of the Committee who had concerns about 3 the legislation as it was introduced, which was 4 the model legislation from the Council of State
5 Governments, and started working with the banking 6 department at your direction, Mr. Chairman, on 7 what made sense in terms of legislation.

8 In those three years, I think we have 9 worked with four or five banking secretaries and 10 interim secretaries and worked with the Committee
11 over several years to work on this legislation.
12 The bill that you see today, 2150, is not the 13 model legislation adopted by the Council of State 14 Governments, nor is it the legislation that the 15 industry requests necessarily when they come into 16 those states.

17 Each state really crafts the 18 legislation to address the needs of its own 19 constituency. So you will find every piece of 20 legislation across the states very different. I 21 can tell you that 2150 is probably one of the most 22 restrictive pieces of legislation currently even 23 offered out there. I can tell you I don't think 24 that that's the final form from all I have heard 25 from Representative Ross and from others. I think

1 this is a work in process. I know we're not here
2 to talk about the legislation.

3 And I see the Secretary in here. So 4 in deference to his time, I will stop it there and 5 answer any questions.

6 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thanks, Ms. Stewart.
7 The gentleman from Lancaster, Mr. Gillespie, has a
8 question.

9 REPRESENTATIVE GILLESPIE: Thank you,
10 Mr. Chairman. Thank you. How many clients do you 11 have?

12 MS. STEWART: In Pennsylvania or 13 across the country?

14 REPRESENTATIVE GILLESPIE: With 15 Advance America and CSFA.

16 MS. STEWART: I can get that number
17 for you. I didn't bring it with me today. I did 18 bring the numbers in terms of dollar figures and 19 credit we advance, which is about $27 billion to 20 $30 billion in credit each year. I did bring the 21 number of outlets that we think we have in 22 Pennsylvania. It's hard to tell when you don't 23 regulate and license those. We think there are 24 over 300 payday advance outlets in the State of 25 Pennsylvania.

1 REPRESENTATIVE GILLESPIE: What's been 2 your experience with those as to how many,
3 percentage-wise or number-wise, default on their 4 loans?

5 MS. STEWART: Interestingly enough, we 6 heard earlier today that the default rates are 7 relatively high. I can tell you the experience 8 that I have with CSFA is that that is not the 9 case. In terms of subprime lending, we probably 10 have one of the lowest default rates because our 11 customers know if they default on a loan, they 12 won't get another loan from us.

13 For Advance America, for every hundred 14 customers that walk through our doors, about 90 of 15 them will come back and pay us back and be 16 responsible in how they utilize that product. Out 17 of that other 10 percent, I think about half of 18 them will pay us back but will pay us back after 19 the deadline is extended. They will contact us.
20 They will enter into some kind of an agreement 21 with us or a repayment plan. We will do those 22 repayment plans whenever a customer needs it. We 23 won't wait for a number of successive times to put 24 that in place, in terms of my company.

25 out of the five that don't come back

1 and pay us back, we deposit their checks and about 2 half of those checks clear. The other half of 3 those are write-offs. We will write off about two 4 and a half to three loans per hundred.

5 REPRESENTATIVE GILLESPIE: Thank you.
6 Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

7 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from
8 Westmoreland, Mr. Casorio, has a question.

9 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
10 Mr. Chairman. Ms. Stewart, thank you for being 11 here as well. You certainly had an extensive list 12 of data on the socioeconomic backgrounds of your 13 clients. Do you have any data that might suggest 14 the general use of these funds that folks come in 15 for? I know it's not a prerequisite for them to 16 say they are going to fix Chairman Hasay's 17 refrigerator or maybe buy an airplane ticket to 18 see somebody in Boston, but do you have any data 19 that suggests that?

20 MS. STEWART: We don't have data. We 21 do not ask a customer why they are taking out the 22 loan. I will tell you anecdotally from traveling 23 across the country and spending a day in a store
24 in many different parts of the country what I 25 hear. And what I hear as the No. 1 reason that

1 customers come in and take out a payday loan is 2 that they have something wrong with their car, 3 that they need a car to get to work and so they 4 have to repair that right away.

5 I have heard everything from that to 6 customers that do exactly what one of the 7 gentlemen mentioned, which is have some unexpected 8 need or some need that they don't budget for come 9 up, like your property taxes being due or your 10 taxes on your car being due or that type of thing 11 and they will take out loans for that. They will 12 take out loans to buy Christmas presents for their 13 children. They will take loans out for back to 14 school. They will take out loans for vacations.

15 I mean, I have heard any variety of 16 reasons that customers will take out a payday
17 loan. Typically, it's some expense that is not a 18 normal monthly budgeted expense that may arise and 19 may arise six or seven or eight times a year.

20 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Let me just,
21 before I ask a closed question, go to -- again, we 22 didn't have the luxury of a written statement.
23 Your comments were -- and correct me if I'm wrong.
24 You mentioned bounced checks, overdrafts, late 25 fees from credit cards companies and comparatively

1 you were stating those to be in the same range, if 2 you will, of some of the rates we have seen from 3 earlier testifiers for pay services that we have 4 been witnessing here today.

5 I would say, though, that -- and 6 certainly you can make comment if the Chairman 7 sees fit -- certainly the bounced checks and 8 overdraft fees and late charges on credit cards, 9 for hopefully the majority of us, are exceptions.
10 Those are things that would come up not on a 11 regular course.

12 The norm, as I have witnessed here
13 today, the norm is that page that we saw earlier 14 with the annual percentage rate of 456 percent.
15 That's the norm. I think really, yes, the bounced 16 check fees and the overdraft statements and the 17 late charges on credit cards comparatively may be 18 predatory in themselves as well, yes. But I, 19 again, see that 456 percent being predatory.

20 So really I guess the analogy is it
21 isn't comparing apples with oranges. It's, what I 22 see it anyway as, comparing apples with apples.
23 Just because the banks charge those kinds of fees 24 and maybe take advantage of some folks, it doesn't 25 make the 456 percent APR -- and that's the one

1 example we saw -- certainly right.

2 Let me ask you a question about 3 privacy. You said that folks come to you because 4 of privacy concerns. They don't want to go to the 5 bank. They don't want to go to a brother-in-law, 6 whoever. Does -- and, one, I'll ask you for 7 Advance who you can speak for and, two, maybe you 8 would have information industry-wide. I will 9 follow up with a question I asked earlier. Does 10 the industry -- do they sell any information from 11 individual consumers coming into your place of 12 business?

13 MS. STEWART: I want to address each
14 of your points. The answer is no, we do not sell 15 any information that we have from any of our 16 customers. That information is private. As a 17 matter of fact, if you come in and visit my 18 store -- and I hope you will show up at one of our 19 stores and visit it. If you were to look at a 20 customer file, we would do exactly what the 21 gentleman did that gave you a loan application and 22 black out any of the information or cover up any 23 of the information that would give any information
24 about that particular customer. We do not share 25 that information. We, just like a bank, have very 1 strict privacy rules and laws and policies that we 2 follow.

3 In terms of your question about 456
4 APR versus some of these others, I would probably 5 venture a guess that you would not need a payday 6 loan either but there is a segment of the 7 population -- as a matter of fact, I think Bretton 8 Woods did a study -- and I'll be glad to provide 9 that for you after the fact -- on bounced check 10 practices.

11 What that study showed, if I can 12 paraphrase that -- and I won't be exactly accurate 13 because I didn't bring the data. But for those 14 customers that bounced checks in a bank -- I can 15 get you the percentage. I want to say 10 or 20 16 percent of the customers that have banking
17 accounts bounce checks. The customers that do 18 bounce checks typically bounce several checks at 19 any given time and several checks over periods of 20 time. So the customers that bounce checks
21 typically bounce more than one and bounce them 22 frequently.

23 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: And I would 24 tend to agree with you. But I guess maybe what I 25 was saying is that although it seems that you may

1 be correct at least from some knowledge of yours,
2 secondhand, of folks that maybe bounce a check, 3 they repeatedly do that or do that on some 4 frequent basis.

5 Again, for those of us that pay our 6 bills -- and I'm sure some of us have incurred 7 through being away, through a sick member of the 8 family, through just the mail process, maybe 9 incurred an inadvertant late charge on a credit 10 card or whatever and we try to get that rectified.
11 Again, I think that 10 percent of the population 12 isn't the norm of what we see. They are the 13 exception, hopefully.

14 But if a person came into your store
15 or any store, good credit, hard working,
16 supporting a family, strapped because their car
17 transmission broke and they need that $500 to pay 18 the local mechanic, that 456 percent rate that we 19 saw earlier is the exception. It isn't the norm.
20 Maybe I'm wrong. Is there a way for folks that 21 come in with better credit than others to get a 22 better rate?

23 MS. STEWART: No. But to answer your 24 question, we do -- and I can give you the data 25 both from my company and for the CSFA member

1 companies as well in terms of -- you know, we're 2 really talking about, in all of this, customers 3 that use this product over and over and over and 4 taking out loans over and over and over. Even if 5 you look at the information that was provided from 6 Florida, I think 80 percent of the customers don't 7 use it over and over. They use it twelve times or 8 less a year. They may use it monthly. But that 9 certainly is not flipping it every time or using it 10 each time successively.

11 I think the majority of customers that 12 get payday loans -- and we have a number of 13 customers that come in one time and we never see 14 them again. We have a number of customers that 15 come in a couple of times a year or they may come 16 in because they are on commission or there are 17 some extenuating circumstances that they may use 18 it successively for two or three times and then go 19 away for six months and we never see them again.

20 So there's really not a cookie cutter
21 way. But I will tell you the majority of our 22 customers are using the product responsibly, just 23 as you're referring to. They are not using it 24 every time which would in actuality get up to a 25 456 APR.

1 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: So 80 percent
2 in the Florida study, just for example, they came 3 in, take out the loan for the car, pay it off in 4 the 14 -- and pay it off with the $100 per $500
5 roughly that they borrowed. They come in in a 6 14-day period and pay off that $500 loan and pay 7 $600 back to the Advance America; is that correct?

8 MS. STEWART: And walk away.

9 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Again, I said
10 it earlier. We certainly can't regulate what 11 folks do, whether they drink, smoke, gamble. They 12 come into your store of their own free will and 13 their own volition, I guess. And they are walking 14 in on their own free volition and if they chose to 15 do so, that's their choice. But, again, that kind 16 of percentage rate, even a lower percentage rate 17 from 456 for a two-week loan, unless you're 18 strapped to the end of the wall, I guess, seems to 19 me, again, predatory.

20 I appreciate you taking time to be 21 here. There is certainly no martyrdom for you 22 from this panel and we are hearing from folks who 23 have been giving us great resource information
24 today. But I want to thank you for coming.

25 MS. STEWART: Certainly. And just to

1 make one final point about that, too, we are here
2 to work with the Committee, with the banking 3 department, with all interested parties. We 4 welcome sitting down at the table with anyone who 5 is interested in talking with us about a 6 compromise on this.

7 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
8 Mr. Chairman.

9 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Ms. Stewart, thank 10 you for coming today. There's another question, a 11 member that has a question. The Committee aired 12 this payday lending out today to hear both sides 13 of it. It's interesting to hear what you have to 14 say about you give a quick -- that's a quick loan 15 and a convenient loan to your clients. Your 16 client, if he's going to borrow $500, why wouldn't 17 he use his credit card?

18 MS. STEWART: The majority of our 19 customers have credit cards. I think 57 or 58
20 percent of our customers have credit cards. There 21 are a number of reasons that they may not want to 22 use them. One of them that I have heard, 23 interestingly enough, on many occasions is that 24 they don't see a credit card as a short-term loan 25 product. They pay the minimum on that credit card

1 and they see that as a longer-term credit option 2 that they have and may not have the wherewithal in 3 terms of the discipline to pay back that credit
4 card in full, rather than just paying the minimum
5 term that they legally could pay or paying it 6 late. A number of our customers like the 7 short-term aspect of that card.

8 Another point that I wanted to make,
9 going back to the earlier gentleman's point, is 10 that banks tell us that it costs them over $150 to 11 originate a loan of any size, to originate and 12 service a loan. So while the 23 percent APR that 13 is currently in your Consumer Discount Act and 14 it's been suggested today, if you think about 15 that, that is less than 10 cents a day to loan 16 money, to have $100 out on the street. We can't 17 pay our light bill, much less our employees, for 18 that amount of a fee that we would be getting in.

19 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from 20 Westmoreland, the other gentleman that's on this 21 Committee from Westmoreland County -- I don't know
22 how two from the same county got in. Mr.
23 Tangretti has a question.

24 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Thank you,
25 Mr. Chairman. Ms. Stewart, I think it became

1 pretty obvious that all of the testifiers prior to 2 you were opposed to payday lending and, in fact,
3 fairly well described the process as predatory.

4 In Ms. McGill's pamphlet, the Center
5 for Responsible Lending brochure pamphlet, it has 6 seven signs of predatory payday loans. Given the 7 nature of that, I'm going to ask you to react to 8 this from the same document. Ninety-one percent 9 of all payday loans are made to borrowers with 10 five or more payday loans per year.

11 MS. STEWART: Five or more per year?
12 I don't know if the 91 percent is correct. I know 13 that a number of benefit departments have done 14 studies on usage, as has the industry, and the 15 figure that I use is about six or seven payday 16 loans a year.

17 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Is that a
18 bad thing?

19 THE WITNESS: No, I don't believe
20 that's a bad thing.

21 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Let me read
22 these to you. I want you to react to them as it
23 relates to your industry. This is the seven signs 24 of a predatory payday loan. Repeated loan 25 flipping through renewals, extensions or

1 back-to-back loans charging more fees for no new 2 money.

3 MS. STEWART: Well, I would submit to 4 you that if you roll over a loan, which means that 5 you come in and you pay none of the principal 6 back, that you pay the interest only and take that 7 loan out again, that you are borrowing the exact 8 same money. I know there are others that may 9 disagree with that.

10 But if a customer comes in and pays us 11 back completely, just like they had the option of 12 using their credit card at the department store 13 and going down to another department store and 14 using it again the same day, I don't believe that 15 that is borrowing the same money. There was a 16 question asked earlier today about a customer
17 having lots of loans out at the same time. I 18 think that's something your banking secretary will 19 probably address and is working on addressing.

20 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: What you're 21 suggesting is that even though if somebody may do 22 that -- and you are not necessarily agreeing with 23 the certain percentage of people who have repeat 24 loans -- that isn't necessarily a bad thing either 25 in your opinion?

1 MS. STEWART: If they use it
2 successively, is that your question?

3 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Yes.

4 MS. STEWART: No, I think if they are 5 using it responsibly, that's one thing.

6 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: As an 7 industry, how do you prevent someone from not 8 being responsible in that process?

9 MS. STEWART: I can tell you, as a 10 company, we do a couple of different things. One 11 of the things we do is subscribe to an industry 12 database to check to make sure that our 13 customers -- to look at what kind of usage they 14 have with other companies. Do they have other 15 outstanding payday loans with other companies? Do 16 they have other subprime loans out in terms of 17 rent-to-own, that kind of thing. We will look at 18 that in terms of ability to pay.

19 Then we also, after a certain period 20 of time, tell the customer -- and it could be 21 after the second loan, because we get to know our 22 customers, or it could be after the fifth loan.
23 We will impose a cooling off period, a break, in 24 that product. We are in the business of getting 25 our money back.

1 If we see a customer that's using it
2 responsibly and struggling to pay us back, we will 3 either work with them to set up a repayment plan
4 or we won't loan them the money because we do want 5 to be paid back. We don't want all of our 6 customers to end up in default.

7 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Short
8 minimum loan term, usually two weeks, which is not 9 enough time for a borrower to recover from 10 emergency situations, do you view that as a 11 predatory lending practice?

12 MS. STEWART: No, I do not, because I 13 feel like these are small denominational and 14 short-term credit. When a customer comes in, we 15 explain to them exactly what is the proper use of 16 a payday loan. We look at what they give us. We 17 look at how much they earn.

18 Because the customer may be able by 19 law to borrow $500 -- I can tell you our average 20 loans are much less than that. They are about 21 $245 because we do look at their ability to repay 22 that loan based on what their source of income is, 23 based on the amount of income they have and we 24 will only lend a percentage that we think is 25 reasonable for them to be able to pay us back in

1 terms of that loan.

2 I would submit other CSFA companies do
3 the same thing. It's the companies that lend 100 4 percent of what that customer shows them on their 5 pay stub that tends to be the kind of practice 6 you're referring to.

7 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Single 8 balloon payment instead of an installment plan
9 that allows partial payments over time, you 10 suggested that you may or may not exercise the 11 option to do that if you feel it's appropriate?

12 MS. STEWART That is correct. There 13 are states that have passed laws triggering an 14 installment plan after a period of time.

15 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Okay.
16 Triple-digit interest rates usually over 400
17 percent.

18 MS. STEWART: I think I have alluded 19 to that but I will be glad to talk again about the 20 fact --

21 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: I'm 22 curious, if I may. You did allude to it. In 23 fact, you explained it fairly well, I think. I'm 24 just curious about the methodology. The 25 calculations for those interest rates vis-a-vis

1 the ATM charges and the bounced checks and the 2 like is the same calculation as it relates to 3 your --

4 MS. STEWART: That is correct.

5 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Here's one
6 that I guess gets to the first question and that 7 is consideration of the borrower's ability to pay.
8 My guess is a guess. But what I suspect from what 9 you're telling me is that you look at a paycheck
10 only and you determine that individual's ability 11 to pay based on what his bi-weekly pay is or 12 monthly pay is or whatever, the method by which 13 he's paid, as opposed to outstanding debts and 14 other kinds of payments and other indebtedness
15 that he or she may have incurred.

16 As you get into this turning over of 17 loans or extending loans four and five or six and 18 eight and ten, how could you possibly make that 19 judgment without knowing those other details about 20 one's financial life?

21 MS. STEWART: I have two responses to 22 that. One is that I think the due diligence that 23 you do on a loan depends on the size of a loan.
24 If I were extending a home mortgage to you, the 25 due diligence I would do in looking at you as a

1 credit risk is much greater than the due diligence
2 I would do to extend credit of $230.

3 I think not only do we look at the 4 amount of income that comes in, the source of 5 income, but we also look at the bank statement for 6 a number of reasons. One is to insure that they 7 do have an active checking account. But also we 8 look through that checking account statement to 9 see what that history is in terms of the checks 10 that have been written, what bills have been paid 11 in that.

12 I think the fact that my company, in 13 particular, and CSFA companies have such a low 14 default rate speaks highly of our ability to 15 assess the ability to repay of those customers 16 without ordering a full credit report which 17 obviously would be much more than the $17.50 we 18 would get for issuing $100 to you. We would be 19 paying more on the credit reports and doing that 20 kind of due diligence over a period of time than 21 we would be able to collect in a fee that we 22 charge for that money.

23 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Using a 24 check as collateral for the loan, leading to 25 insufficient funds fees, bounced check fees and

1 fear of criminal prosecution for writing a bad 2 check.

3 MS. STEWART: Using the check as 4 collateral?

5 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Yes.

6 MS. STEWART: That check is held, as I
7 had mentioned earlier. Very few of our customers' 8 checks are ever dealt with other than to hand them
9 back to the customer because the customers do pay 10 us back. Some consider that check as collateral.
11 It's a personal check. It's not a paycheck. We 12 know when we are taking that check, that we are 13 taking our chances that we won't get the money
14 back from that check. I'm not sure exactly how it 15 is predatory. The worst thing that can happen is 16 they can't get another loan from us and walk away.

17 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Mandatory
18 arbitration clauses which eliminate the borrower's 19 right to sue.

20 MS. STEWART: That is in our 21 agreements. We follow all of the federal laws in 22 terms of how we can deal with arbitration and we 23 stick to those laws very, very carefully.

24 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Mr.
25 Chairman and Ms. Stewart, if I may ask, you had

1 mentioned a couple of times statistical data that 2 you would provide to the Committee. I would be 3 interested, Mr. Chairman, if we could -- we talked 4 about default rates and someone asked about total 5 number of customers and the like. It would be 6 very helpful if we had those for us.

7 MS. STEWART: I would be happy to get 8 those for you.

9 REPRESENTATIVE TANGRETTI: Thank you,
10 Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Ms. Stewart.

11 CHAIRMAN HASAY: Thank you, Ms.
12 Stewart. We would appreciate that information 13 that Mr. Tangretti has requested. I think that 14 would be very helpful to the members of the 15 Committee. Thank you very much. What state did 16 you work in the Legislature?

17 MS. STEWART: South Carolina.

18 CHAIRMAN HASAY: I thought it was down
19 south. Finally, we are honored to have here the 20 Secretary of Banking, the Honorable William 21 Schenek. Thank you for being here. As you know, 22 we are airing out payday lending and there's a 23 bill that's in Committee. But as we had spoken 24 previously, we have agreed to work with the 25 Department and you, Mr. Secretary, and Governor

1 Rendell's office as well. So proceed when you're 2 ready.

3 SECRETARY SCHENEK: Thank you, Mr.
4 Chairman, members of the Committee. I applaud you
5 for having a hearing on this important subject. I
6 am going to begin with a little history. I first 7 began to learn about payday lending when I started 8 this job of Secretary of Banking in February of 9 2003.

10 At that time, people came to talk
11 about payday lending in our office and presented 12 it as a business which meets one time for 13 occasional needs. Somebody's car breaks down.
14 You got to get to work. You need $200 to fix the 15 car. The payday comes. They pay off the loan.

16 I understood the $35 charge for 17 borrowing that $200 as a banker because it costs
18 money to put in an office and pay the light, heat 19 and rent, to pay the salaries, to pay for the 20 computers and $35 taken alone is not a significant 21 amount of money to charge for a financial 22 transaction. And $35 is certainly a lot, as the 23 discussion I have heard so far, certainly a lot 24 relevant to $200. But relevant to the transaction 25 itself, I could understand that, especially

1 meeting a one-time need.

2 I also learned at the time that the 3 industry is unregulated in Pennsylvania and 4 developed the feeling rather quickly that it
5 should be regulated. We also sent a Secretary's 6 letter to all of the banks that we charter in 7 Pennsylvania saying we would look at them very 8 hard if they chose to rent their charter to payday
9 loan companies, to use their charters for payday
10 loan companies to come into Pennsylvania or to go 11 to any other state.

12 The federal regulators had already 13 basically prohibited federally-chartered banks 14 from doing that. The only banks that were doing 15 it were state banks. I wanted to make sure that 16 if a state bank was doing it, it wasn't a
17 Pennsylvania bank. And no Pennsylvania banks now 18 rent their charters to payday loan companies.

19 We then began extensive research in 20 the banking department, looking at what other 21 states are doing, what the seminars were and 22 became knowledgeable about the business. One of 23 the things we learned is this idea of a payday
24 loan company having its business model based on a 25 one time or occasional loan was simply not the

1 business model. The business model is a 2 relationship business. The business model is to 3 make it easy for consumers to borrow this money 4 over and over again.

5 Ms. Jones borrows $200 for two weeks
6 and pays $35. At the end of two weeks, she has a 7 choice. She can pay $35 to borrow it again or she 8 can pay them 200. She has to buy groceries. It's 9 pretty obvious Ms. Jones is going to pay the $35.
10 At the end of six months, she has paid them $420 11 and she still owes them 200 bucks. That's the 12 model we looked at.

13 Now, I believe that all of us working 14 together have multiple options right now. We 15 could do nothing and allow the industry to 16 continue to operate in Pennsylvania unregulated.
17 We could pass legislation which allows present 18 practices but they are regulated. We could put 19 the industry out of business in Pennsylvania and 20 do that through legislation or potentially -- it 21 would be time consuming and it would be 22 expensive -- but the Banking Department could 23 begin litigation and enter the courts to try to 24 put them out of business.

25 There is another alternative. We

1 could develop legislation which would allow the 2 business to go on in a very modified fashion with 3 real consumer protections. At this point, I
4 believe that that may be a viable route. If it's 5 not possible to do that and I believe to get 6 legislation which adequately really protects the 7 consumer, then I believe we should take the steps 8 necessary to get the payday lenders out of 9 Pennsylvania.

10 We're working with Representative
11 Chris Ross to develop legislation which I believe 12 would put protections in place. Let me describe 13 the kinds of protections we are talking about.
14 First of all, a maximum loan amount of the lesser 15 of $500 or 25 percent of the consumer's gross 16 monthly income.

17 A consumer would only be able to 18 borrow from one payday lender at a time. We could 19 establish a database, an independent database 20 which would be developed by the Department of 21 Banking, which would be paid for by the payday 22 lenders, a third-party vendor. The database would 23 record every payday loan that was made to track 24 those to insure that the consumer was only 25 borrowing from one payday lender at a time and

1 understand what was going on with each of those 2 loans.

3 We can also put in place a cooling off
4 period, a period of time during which the consumer 5 cannot borrow from a payday lender of any type,
6 completely out of the industry. If they have a 7 chance to sit back and think, what am I doing 8 here? Is this really working for me and my 9 family? Is this something I really want to do?

10 At the end of the time of the cooling 11 off period we require, say, several loans could be 12 made. The cooling off period is required. If a 13 consumer, at that point in time, could not repay 14 their loan of $200, didn't have $200 in cash, 15 couldn't repay it, they would go into a required
16 term loan arrangement, a mandatory term out plan, 17 probably no more than $50 every two weeks, some 18 manageable amount of money that a family could 19 handle. If they were borrowing $500, it would 20 take 10 two-week periods to pay it off.

21 Also we would propose in the 22 legislation that at any time that a consumer would 23 decide that they didn't want in this anymore, they 24 could raise their hand and say, I want out. I 25 want it termed. I want to be able to pay no more

1 than $50 every two weeks and get out of this.
2 It's their option, as distinguished from the 3 cooling off period which is required, which is if 4 they couldn't pay the principal amount, the full 5 amount due, they would be required to go into that 6 payout period.

7 We would also have all the fees and 8 charges posted, have it very clear to the consumer 9 that's coming in and borrowing that mandatory 10 repayments were in place, the cooling off period
11 is in place. It would also ask the payday lenders 12 to contribute 25 cents for every transaction that 13 they do into a Commonwealth fund that would 14 provide national literacy programs in 15 Pennsylvania.

16 We would have real consumer protection 17 in the event that they are unable to make these 18 payments. For example, with dishonored checks, 19 the damages for bad checks that are in present 20 legislation would not apply. Contracts should not 21 contain provisions which waive consumer rights and 22 cannot contain mandatory arbitration clauses. The 23 Big Boss collection company that was mentioned 24 earlier wouldn't have very many tools to operate.
25 The lender wouldn't have an unfair leverage over

1 the consumer if they weren't able to pay.

2 The two other things we are doing, we 3 are working with the credit unions to actively 4 encourage the credit unions to be real competitors
5 for the payday lending. And there are credit
6 unions that would like to do that. It will be a 7 slow process. But I believe some will stand up 8 and offer real alternatives.

9 We are also working with consumer
10 discount companies, consumer finance companies.
11 We believe that under the present Consumer 12 Discount Act, that there may be room for the 13 combination of the interest rates that are allowed 14 and the fees that are allowed to let consumer 15 discount companies make these kinds of loans at 16 higher charges than they make today that include 17 the fees but substantially less than payday
18 lending companies charge. Are they viable 19 competitors? We don't know. But they began to 20 show an interest at this point.

21 Let me stop there and take your 22 questions, Mr. Chairman.

23 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from
24 Westmoreland, Mr. Casorio, has a question.

25 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,

1 Mr. Chairman. I knew it would only be a matter of 2 time before you mixed up the colleagues from 3 Westmoreland. It's been a long day. But thank 4 you. You have done a great job and you have been 5 the butt of our refrigerator jokes. So thank you 6 for being so understanding.

7 Secretary Schenek, thank you for being 8 here. It's a pleasure to have you here. We know
9 the drive from State College on a warm August day
10 is not as pleasant as sitting here with us. I 11 know you would agree. I wanted to say that I'm 12 encouraged by your brief comments, quite frankly.
13 You weren't physically here for most of the day 14 but you know what went on.

15 SECRETARY SCHENEK: Paul told me.

16 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: You know what 17 we heard. You know the process probably better 18 than those of us up here. I am encouraged by what 19 you have told us. We're hoping -- and I think 20 that's unanimous with the members that are here
21 now and we have had a pretty large delegation here 22 over this afternoon that's come and gone -- that 23 we can work with the Administration to take care
24 of this problem immediately by the end of November 25 when we leave here for sign or die. I think

1 that's a realistic goal.

2 I only throw that out because what I
3 heard from you today is a very detailed, 4 prescribed, methodical process that we're going to 5 go through to help the consumers, to clean up this 6 mess and to make sure that folks aren't preyed 7 upon just because they are making $5.15 an hour or 8 they don't have a GED or high school diploma or 9 maybe they don't know the difference between a 10 certificate of deposit and an annuity and a mutual 11 fund. That's not their fault. We need to do what 12 we can.

13 I said earlier before you got here
14 that we can't regulate folks, whether they want to 15 smoke or drink or get these loans or gamble. We 16 can't. That's not our business. It will never 17 happen. But we can allow them to have the tools.
18 With your help and the Administration's help, I am 19 certainly encouraged.

20 Can you get us, Mr. Secretary -- I'm 21 sure you will -- the prescribed formula that you 22 have given us here this afternoon, a listing of 23 the points that you based it on? I, for one, and 24 the Chairman, if not, would certainly be willing 25 to spearhead this effort and work with the

1 Administration to try to alleviate some of the 2 problems we have heard today.

3 SECRETARY SCHENEK: Thank you.

4 REPRESENTATIVE CASORIO: Thank you,
5 Mr. Secretary. Thank you, Chairman Hasay.

6 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The gentleman from
7 Lackawanna, Mr. Wansacz, has a question.

8 REPRESENTATIVE WANSACZ: Thank you,
9 Mr. Chairman and thank you, Mr. Secretary. I was 10 a little at first disturbed to hear you talking 11 about cars when our theme has been refrigerators.
12 But the question that I have -- and I am very 13 encouraged by what you were talking about, taking 14 some steps. When we come back to, let's say, this 15 Big Boss and you talked about taking the tools
16 away from Big Boss, what type of tools are you 17 going to take? I mean, what type of tools can we 18 really regulate to take away from these collection 19 companies which are trying to get some of the 20 money back?

21 SECRETARY SCHENEK: As I understand
22 it, there is pretty tough legislation in place
23 right now that gives collection companies tools 24 including criminal proceedings. We would remove 25 that and remove most of the tools under the civil

1 proceedings as well so that basically if you want
2 to make one of these loans and charge this rate, 3 you're on your own.

4 REPRESENTATIVE WANSACZ: Thank you,
5 Mr. Secretary.

6 CHAIRMAN HASAY: The Committee looks 7 forward to working with you, Mr. Secretary, on 8 this issue. The Chair thanks you very much for 9 coming here today. I know you were out in State 10 College and rushed back through construction and 11 everything else that's going on up in those 12 interstates. Again, thank you very much. We look 13 forward to working with you and seek your advice
14 and consult and wisdom on this issue.

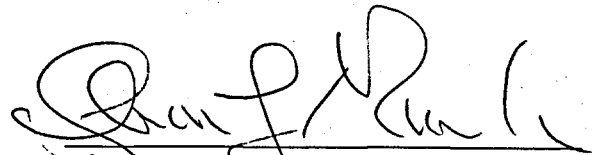

15 SECRETARY SCHENEK: Thank you, Mr.
16 Chairman.

17 CHAIRMAN HASAY: This hearing is now 18 adjourned.
