

“At Susquehanna University, we: actively seek to identify and reject systemic and individual biases against individuals based on race, ethnicity, national or geographic origin, sex, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, disability, social class, age, religion, political affiliation, and marital or parental status. Each individual’s identity is intersectional, deriving varying degrees of advantages and/or limitations from the experiences that frame our lives.—Susquehanna University Statement of Ethical and Inclusive Living

Therefore the Susquehanna community embraces LGBTQ inclusion. Exclusion or discrimination against transgender individuals is a violation of our community principles and policies. Any ban on transgender student athletes is a violation of these core values.”
