13 Section 603-C. Retroactive denial of reimbursement.

14 (a) General rule.--If an insurer retroactively denies 15 reimbursement to a health care provider, the insurer may only:

16 (1) retroactively deny reimbursement for services
17 subject to coordination of benefits with another insurer, the 18 medical assistance program or the Medicare program during the 19 12-month period after the date that the insurer paid the 20 health care provider; and

21 (2) except as provided in paragraph (1), retroactively
22 deny reimbursement during a 12-month period after the date
23 that the insurer paid the health care provider.

24 (b) Written notice.--An insurer that retroactively denies 25 reimbursement to a health care provider under subsection (a)
26 shall provide the health care provider with a written statement 27 specifying the basis for the retroactive denial. If the 28 retroactive denial of reimbursement results from coordination of 29 benefits, the written statement shall provide the name and 30 address of the entity acknowledging responsibility for payment

1 of the denied claim.

2 Section 604-C. Effect of noncompliance.

3 Except as provided in section 605-C, an insurer that does not 4 comply with the provisions of section 603-C may not 5 retroactively deny reimbursement or attempt in any manner to 6 retroactively collect reimbursement already paid to a health
7 care provider.

8 Section 605-C. Fraudulent or improperly coded information.

9 (a) Reasons for denial.--The provisions of section 603-C do
10 not apply if an insurer retroactively denies reimbursement to a 11 health care provider because:

12 (1) the information submitted to the insurer was 13 fraudulent;

14 (2) the information submitted to the insurer was 15 improperly coded and the insurer has provided to the health
16 care provider sufficient information regarding the coding 17 guidelines used by the insurer at least 30 days prior to the 18 date the services subject to the retroactive denial were 19 rendered; or

20 (3) the claim submitted to the insurer was a duplicate
21 claim.

22 (b) Improper coding.--Information submitted to the insurer
23 may be considered to be improperly coded under subsection (a) (2)
24 if the information submitted to the insurer by the health care
25 provider:

26 (1) uses codes that do not conform with the coding
27 guidelines used by the carrier applicable as of the date the 28 service or services were rendered; or

29 (2) does not otherwise conform with the contractual
30 obligations of the health care provider to the insurer

1 applicable as of the date the service or services were 2 rendered.

3 Section 606-C. Coordination of benefits.

4 If an insurer retroactively denies reimbursement for services
5 as a result of coordination of benefits under provisions of 6 section 605-C(a), the health care provider shall have six months
7 from the date of the denial, unless an insurer permits a longer
8 time period, to submit a claim for reimbursement for the service
9 to the insurer, the medical assistance program or Medicare
10 program responsible for payment.

11 Section 2. This act shall take effect in 60 days.
